Seek to move sludge meeting to Wilmington

Wilmington officials are asking the Mass. Water Resources Authority (MWRA) to move a meeting to Wilmington, instead of its presently posted site in Bedford.

The meeting has been called by the MWRA to accept comments on the scope of environmental studies that will be conducted at sites under consideration for potential residual management (sludge) facilities.

The MWRA last year announced twelve sites where sludge facilities may be built. One site is off Andover Street in North Wilmington. A developer is planning a subdivision for the same site. Presently the subdivision proposal is before the Conservation Commission.

The hearing for Wilmington and Bedford has been posted for Bedford High School on Thurs., Feb. 18 at 7:30 p.m.

The reason that local officials want the hearing moved to Wilmington is that last week, the MWRA announced that the Bedford site is no longer under consideration.

Bedford High School, incidentally, is located on Mudge Way.

Upcoming dates

Thurs., Feb. 11: State Housing Appeals Committee continued hearing on the Wilmington Arborvitae Apartments project. Town Hall, Room 9, 10 a.m.

Fri., Feb. 12: Warrant closed for petition articles for April Annual Town Meeting.

Thurs., Feb. 18: MWRA hearing on the sludge facility. Bedford High School, Bedford, at 7:30 p.m. This meeting, which is open to the public, will review the environmental suitability of chosen sites and how the sites were evaluated.

Tues., Feb. 23: Board of Appeals hearing on the Shawheen River Estates project. Town Hall auditorium, 7 p.m.

Thurs., March 3: Deadline for filing nomination papers for the Town Election.

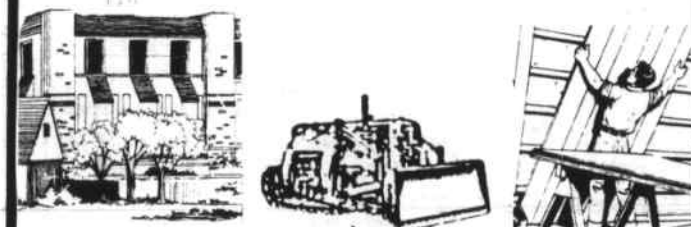

Tues., March 22: Finance Committee public hearing on the Annual Town Meeting budget items.

Tues., March 29: Joint hearing of Fincom and Wilmington Planning Board on zoning articles for the Annual Town Meeting.

The carnival rides at Larry Cushing's yard have good reason to be smiling. The Fourth of July Committee on Tuesday night selected Wilmington Pop Warner to run the carnival during the Fourth of July celebration in Wilmington. Pop Warner will use Cushing's LMC Amusements.

Swain School TV studio approved

Plans to locate a cable TV studio at the Swain School on a temporary basis have received the blessing of both the Wilmington School Committee and the Wilmington Board of Selectmen.

Charles Gilbert, who heads up Wilmington Community TV Inc, was pleased when selectmen agreed Monday night to plans to house the studio in the old school. He seemed undaunted when selectmen spelled out some of the problems in utilizing the basement of the school for office space and the studio proper.

Gilbert said he was aware of water problems during heavy rains and his group planned to use the sump pump available and take the necessary precautions. In addressing the needs of the handicapped who, at the present time would have difficulty entering the school, it was pointed out shooting would take place at 13 locations throughout town. Many of those locations such as the police station, Fourth of July Building, and the schools, said Gilbert, are handicapped accessible.

The only other problem brought up at the meeting was the final use of the Swain School. Selectmen said any use may be temporary since a study is underway which may see the town hall at Glen Road moved to the Swain School. Gilbert said he was aware of the study.

At a previous meeting, the Wilmington School Committee agreed to let group members use the basement of the Swain School for a studio. Gilbert had said the location was the best as far as meeting their need for height and security and for being central to students and other residents.

No agreement on RMLD meeting date

The Wilmington Board of Selectmen Monday night agreed to meet once again with officials of the Reading Municipal Light Department (RMLD).

RMLD Chairman Allan Ames sent a letter to selectmen suggesting a meeting either February 16 or February 29. Ames asked that Lynnfield and North Reading officials be invited to the session.

Because Chairman Robert Cain will not be available on the suggested dates, selectmen said they would prefer to meet on one of the last three Mondays in March. They also said they would feel more comfortable having Town Counsel present at the negotiation table, even though Ames said it might not be necessary to have attorneys or consultants present.

Selectmen agreed that the meeting, which would be open to the public, could go into an executive session to discuss three proposals put together by the Light Board. RMLD General Manager Leonard Rucker will be contacted to finalize the plans.

Pop Warner to run July 4 carnival

Wilmington will have a carnival on the Fourth of July after all. The Fourth of July Committee agreed on Tuesday evening to have Wilmington Pop Warner run a carnival during the July Fourth holiday week.

The selection of Pop Warner was eased by the withdrawal of American Legion Post 136 from consideration. Post Commander Joe Steen said the Legion withdrew to help Pop Warner. He said that it would be inconsistent with the goals of the Legion to compete with a youth group for a fund-raising event.

Pop Warner President Len Howard told the committee that his group had an agreement with the carnival (LMC Enterprises) and that the carnival and Pop Warner would both sign a contract.

Jim Gillis made a motion to have the Pop Warner group run the carnival, provided they submit written contracts at least 60 days before the carnival.

It will be the responsibility of Pop Warner to secure a special permit from the appeals board.

Civil Service overturns lieutenant's demotion

A Wilmington fire lieutenant who was demoted last summer has won his appeal before the state Civil Service Commission. The commission has ordered that Joseph Lundergan be restored to his rank of lieutenant with no loss of compensation.

The commission, however, upheld a 30-day suspension which had been issued against firefighter Robert Andersen. Andersen was given the suspension for failure to take a lie detector test and failure to answer questions.

Both cases stemmed from the case of school committeeman Mitchell Spirits, who died of a heart attack at his home shortly before midnight on Jan. 25, 1987. At issue was a 13-minute delay from the time of the call to the time when a Reading ambulance arrived at the Spirits home. Lt. Lundergan was in charge of the shift that night. There were two other ambulance calls at the same time.

Lundergan was charged with failure to respond to a call and failure to comply with department procedures.

He was demoted in July following a hearing. Lundergan has been out of work with a back injury since before his demotion.

Additonal grant for new school windows

Wilmington has received an additional state grant for new windows at Wilmington High School. The new windows are being installed as a part of Phase II of a renovation project.

The Permanent Building Committee had previously received a grant for $340,000, of which $288,888 was for new, energy-efficient windows. Other items in the grant from the Executive Office of Energy Resources were an energy management system, the sealing of an auditorium roof vent, and the installation of a new boiler.

When the bids were opened for the new windows, however, the low bid was $396,700, from SWS Industries of Moonachie, N.J.

Rep. Jim Miceli sought an increase in the grant. On January 26, Energy Secretary Sharon Pollard announced that an additional $106,072 would be awarded.

The schedule provides 18 weeks for shop drawings and fabrication of materials, and two months of installation. Construction is expected to begin at the end of June.

Correction

Sooner or later we ALL wish the clock would stop for a while, but in last week's Town Crier we did even better than that -- we managed to stop the calendar for a whole week.

Due to an oversight made during the organized chaos of deadline, the date at the top of every page of last week's Town Crier was left unchanged from that of the previous week. Last week's paper should have been the edition of February 3, 1988, instead of January 27, 1988.

It would be nice to live the week over again, but for us it was an unfortunate error.

Emergency committee considering computers

The newly formed Local Emergency Planning Committee (LEPC) is seeking to use a Macintosh computer and a Cameo program to provide needed information during emergency chemical accidents.

According to Maurice Bechard, Technical Projects Manager at Polymer Technology Corp, his LEPC computer committee reviewed various commercial computer packages and found most of them were geared toward industrial emergency response. The most effective system, he said at Monday's LEPC meeting, was a Macintosh computer with a Cameo program which was put together by the United States Coast Guard, the Oceanic Atmospheric Administra-

Treasurer finishes classwork

Tewksbury Treasurer Warren R. Carey has successfully completed the Massachusetts Governmental Accounting, Auditing, and Financial Reporting classes at Bentley College School of Continuing and Professional Studies in Waltham.

Mr. Carey was the only Town or City Treasurer to attend and complete this course, taken during the last four months of 1987, and he was recently advised of his satisfactory grade report by Bentley College.

The program was presented by the college in conjunction with the Massachusetts Department of Revenue and was a presentation of the UMAS Accounting System currently being adopted by the Town of Tewksbury and being encouraged by the Commonwealth for use by all communities as the standard for municipal Auditors and Accountants.

Treasurer/Collector Carey had a unique opportunity to discuss and learn first hand, with many town auditors and accountants performing services for Massachusetts municipalities, the most updated procedures in this field.

Corenco is improved

Things have improved at Corenco according to Bill McMenimen, Tewksbury Public Health Officer.

Corenco faces North Billerica Road, near the town line, although the plant itself is in Billerica. The plant manufactures fertilizers and there have, at times, been odors which the neighbors do no like.

Tewksbury residents in the area have not made any complaints about the plant in quite a while, McMenimen told the board of health.

Asbestos found in Heathbrook ceiling

The Heathbrook School on Shawsheen Street, Tewksbury, has a potential asbestos problem. Bill McMenimen, public health officer, so reported to the Board of Health on Monday night.

Like other schools constructed at that time in Massachusetts, asbestos had been used for purposes of insulation, by state order. Later, also by state order, asbestos was removed from all schools. In McMenimen's opinion the town of Tewksbury was in the forefront when it came to removing asbestos.

But there was asbestos in an area under the roof which was not removed. It was in a closed area, which was sealed off. Recently water began to leak through the roof, and into the cafeteria. The leak was reported by some of the mothers of children in the school.

Joe George of the school department and the Seattle Fire Department.

The Cameo program is geared toward public emergency response. Bechard said this system would give a person at the scene of an accident such information as chemicals involved in a spill and ways to minimize the effects of a spill. It would also help protect the first response team and provide specifics on the evacuation area by picturing a map of the site and nearby hospitals and schools which could be utilized in an emergency.

Bechard said the greatest potential danger to the town is from trucks carrying hazardous materials off Rt. 93 through Wilmington. In case of an accident involving such vehicles, Bechard added, the Cameo system contains lists of "hundreds" of chemicals and a code breaker which could help identify chemicals from partial labels. Once a chemical is identified, steps can then be taken to respond to the danger.

According to Bechard, the Coast Guard would provide Cameo software free of charge and would help install and update the system. The Macintosh computer could be installed in the Wilmington Fire Department with emergency information radioed back and forth or a portable computer could be set up on a truck in an emergency.

Since the town is committed to IBM compatible computers, which at this time do not work with the Cameo system, Bechard hopes to raise up to $10,000 needed for a Macintosh and labor through donations solicited from the approximate 15 local companies in the Industrial Awareness and Response Group. He said he would bring up his proposal at the February meeting of the group. The group was formed one and a half years ago to explore ways they could help the town react to a chemical emergency.

Search continues on Bruce Street

The report two weeks ago of human sewage in the culvert at Bruce Street has become more complicated, the Tewksbury Public Health Officer reported to the Board of Health on Monday.

Bill McMenimen, Public Health Officer, said he is going to ask that the Tewksbury Department of Public Works clean out the manholes in that street. He wants to get individual samples of the water from each manhole -- water that is not contaminated by previous accumulations of dirt or detritus. "A lot more work has to be done," he said.

In one manhole, in the middle of the street, someone has built a dam, of stones and a board, he said.

McMenimen feels that many of the homes have sump pumps, because the cellars were dug too deeply, and that those sump pumps, in draining out the cellars, are also getting water from nearby septic systems. He also feels that many of the homes in the area have small pipelines to the individual manholes, so as to get rid of the cellar water.

The situation is difficult, McMenimen said. In one manhole he looked at a pipe seemingly coming from a nearby cellar, but there was not enough water to collect a sample.

To add to the complications, McMenimen noted that there is a brook, with water, coming from the vicinity of the high school and flowing toward Bruce Street. He believes it may have a high bacteria count, and that the problem on Bruce Street might possibly be coming from another source.

Selectman Charles Coppola on Tuesday night said Representative Jim Miceli has offered to expedite the DEQE investigation, and the board then voted to send a letter to Miceli to ask for his support.

$40,000 needed for Kidspace work

by Arlene Surprenant

The pace is picking up as the Kidspace Committee firms up plans to raise the remainder of the $40,000 needed to build a creative playground in Wilmington.

To date, $11,000 has been realized, thanks to the generosity of parents, town organizations, and the business community. Committee members expect to raise another $9,000 through various fundraisers by Organization Day March 15 and an additional $20,000 by Construction Weekend June 8th.

Kidspace spokesman Barbara Cannon provided Wilmington selectmen with an update on plans Monday night and asked for their help in supplying plexiglass covered fixtures for outdoor lighting at the Shawsheen School site. Selectmen said there may be some available.

Cannon went over upcoming fundraisers for children and adults. On February 26, a dance will be held in the Wilmington/Tewksbury Elks Hall. Tickets may be obtained through Linda Scifo (658-2217) or Gail Holloway (657-8685).

A lively auction of quality donated items is planned for March 11 and a Craft Fair/Flea Market on Wilmington Town Common is slated for April 30. Tables will be rented to local crafters while the committee will be offering Kidspace t-shirts and either popcorn or hot dogs for sale.

Wilmington schoolchildren have not been left out, said Cannon. Two puppet shows are planned for the end of April. And all elementary students are in the midst of a Penny a Pound Drive to pay for the soft pebble gravel which will make up the base of the play area. Children have been asked to bring extra pennies to school in the next few weeks for deposit in a special glass jug. Workers at Arlington Trust have volunteered to count the growing penny collection.

Cannon told selectmen close to 700 "incredible" residents have volunteered their services in some way to help make the dream of an original play area come true.

Kidspace will be built at the Shawsheen School during Construction Weekend June 8-12. The entire job will be in the hands of Wilmington citizens, young and old alike.

The schematic design, created by famed architect Robert Leathers and Wilmington students, has approximately 60 features, including a whale and space ship play section, tunnels, bridges, tire swings, slides, an amphitheater, picnic tables, and a section for disabled youngsters. Those enrolled in this summer's Tiny Tots program will be among the first children to enjoy the hard won playground.

It's YOUR Money

by Joyce Brisbois
Certified Public Accountant

HOW WILL YOU FILE THIS YEAR?

As you start your tax reporting, two questions will arise: will you itemize your expenses or take the standard deduction? And will you and your spouse file jointly or separately?

Under the new tax law, standard deductions for the 1987 tax year have been increased to $2,540 for individuals and $3,760 for couples filing jointly. This is expected to make it easier for more people to take the standard deduction. It's usually wise to tot up your deductible expenses and see what's best for you. Homeowners with big mortgage expenses and high tax bills may still find it worthwhile to itemize.

In certain instances, there may be advantages to filing separately -- if, for instance, one partner has high medical expenses that exceed 7 1/2 percent of his or her own adjusted gross income, but would not meet the floor of their joint income; or there are casualty losses or miscellaneous expenses that do not exceed the two percent exclusion on a joint return.

The proposed traffic lights at the corner of Pleasant and Main Streets in Tewksbury are already too late in coming. Team approach on duplexes

by Arlene Surprenant

Supporters of a plan to create 75 duplexes which would be one hundred percent affordable have agreed to work in conjunction with the Affordable Housing Task Force and the Wilmington Board of Selectmen to bring the proposal before town meeting voters.

Both Dan Gillis and Bill Strob of the Wilmington Housing Authority said they were willing to take a team approach and "hopefully come up with affordable housing." Gillis said after meeting with state officials, they had been advised to present a united front in the search for low to moderate income homes. He added he was opposed to the use of Chapter 774 and would rather see housing built "by the will of the people."

Selectman Jim Stewart, who chairs the Affordable Housing Task

Force, said he was encouraged by the decision to work together since they were all working toward the same end. He said it was his understanding that the state is telling Wilmington "we're going to work with the towns that work with us."

Discussion centered on the So. Main Street town owned site being eyed by Richard and Arthur Dellarciprete for their duplexes. Stewart said the task force prefers having several developers submit bids for that site. He explained developer kits for two large parcels of town land, that site included, will be ready by June and he anticipates bringing any proposals before voters for a final decision.

Stewart predicted because of the use of that site as a town dump and subsequent tests required for toxic materials it could be the spring of 1989 before construction could get underway. Zoning changes would also have to be made.

In referring to the Dellarcipretes, Stewart said he didn't want to give the impression that the task force is turning away developers. In the past, Stewart had said their proposal was one of the best he had seen for affordable housing. However, Stewart told selectmen he simply wanted to "give everybody a shot" at the land.

Stewart announced that EOCD has agreed to provide Wilmington with a full time coordinator one day a week to act as a liaison between the town and the state and help review affordable housing proposals.

Swap three lots for one at pond?

by Arlene Surprenant

A possible swap of three buildable lots for one larger lot adjacent to the old Middlesex Canal and Patches Pond was under consideration by the Wilmington Planning Board Tuesday night.

Developer Joe Langone had suggested the trade since Conservation Administrator Libby Sabounjian was interested in negotiating for the larger lot in the Bedell Estates subdivision for use as open space. The lots are currently owned by builder Jay Tighe and are next to two subdivisions off Chestnut Street owned by Langone.

The planning board is allowed to place a restriction on subdivisions having 24 or more lots. The board can hold a certain percentage of those lots for a three year period in case the town wishes to purchase them, after which they would revert back to the developer. The board is presently holding three of the 27 lots in Bedell Estates, primarily because members were against building on them because of their proximity to Patches Pond. Langone suggested the board release the lots, which continue to go up in value, in exchange for a chance to purchase the larger lot.

Sabounjian is reportedly planning to seek town meeting approval this April to purchase the larger lot. Planning board Chairman said there was a Catch-22 situation. If voters don't agree to the purchase and planners do agree to the trade, the town would lose all four lots. Hamilton said she would prefer to be given three years to purchase the larger lot.

Member Bill Hooper said they should "get whatever we can out of it (a trade)." This seemed to be the consensus of the board.

Wilmington gets state aid increase

Wilmington has been guaranteed a minimum increase of $221,674 in state aid for 1989, according to state Rep. Geoffrey Beckwith. The figure is less than the $289,000 increase received last year and the $300,000 increase figured in the Town Manager's recommended budget for FY 1989.

Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski expressed disappointment over the figure Monday night saying it was a lot lower than he had anticipated or had been led to believe.

"I'm unhappy with that number," Stapczynski told Wilmington selectmen, adding "The local aid formula doesn't work to the suburban community's advantage."

Since the figures are still under review and "it's still early in the game," Stapczynski said he will lobby to try to increase the town's allotment.

Parents organizing a town-wide group

by Arlene Surprenant

Many times, parents wish they could be more informed on school committee issues or upcoming school events. Six Wilmington residents are currently in the preliminary stage of forming a townwide parent group to provide a forum to address local school and townwide issues.

The next meeting of the group will be Tuesday, February 23 at 7:30 p.m. in the Fourth of July Building. This is a follow-up to their January meeting when those present formulated a statement of purpose and discussed several ideas to keep communications open between the school and the home.

Members are interested in developing a parent handbook to help identify key people in the school system, explain the chain of command for solving school related problems, and help identify ongoing school projects like Project DARE. They also hope to create a townwide parent newsletter and come up with a vehicle to communicate school committee decisions and agenda items to the public before a vote is taken in committee meetings.

All Wilmington residents are encouraged to attend the meeting February 23 to become a vital part of the group. For further information, contact Chris DeHoff or Rosemary DeMarco.

HOW TO EVALUATE COMPETING OFFERS

When faced with multiple offers, how do you pick and choose among them? Your Realtor can help by setting up a chart comparing the main features of each proposal. First, there's the price. Consider the closing costs you may be asked to pay. Be sure you understand any terms that might reduce your net profit. Can you work out a mutually agreeable date for you to move out and for the buyers to move in? How clean is each offer? Do the buyers have another property to sell before they can settle on yours? Can you get reasonable assurances that the buyers will be able to qualify for the financing they will need?

Your Realtor can help you weigh the relative merits of each offer. Then you can accept or counter the best one, perhaps line up one of the other offers as an alternative.

For professional advice on all aspects of buying or selling a home, talk to the professionals at Kelley & Kompany. Come by our office at 11 Middlesex Avenue (Suite #10) in Wilmington or call us at 658-4171.

The Humble Farmer

Soldier of misfortune

The pathetic old man hobbled toward me on crutches, stopping from time to time to catch his breath. At 10 paces he paused again and skewered me with black eyes sunk deep into hollow cheeks. His mouth hung open and a twisted jaw worked up and down as if trying to pump out the words.

Seeing he would speak with me I leaned against a blue Mazda pickup truck that was parked at the curb and waited.

"War is heck," he finally exclaimed.

"You survived the Bataan Death March?"

His hands shook on his crutches. "Never heard of Bataan. I'm talking about our undercover war with the Russians."

I quickly looked over my shoulder and whispered, "Shh. Where have you been, man? Nowadays it's not uncommon to see the Russian flag flying over the White House. They're our friends."

"The commies will never be friends of mine," he snarled. Pausing, he looked at the sidewalk and spoke as a broken man, "You don't recognize poor old Rambo, do you?"

"Rambo! But you're not old. If you were you'd know that you won't always hate the commies. Only women's hair styles change more often than enemies. I can easily remember walking home from school when I was a little kid and seeing a Jap, a German or an Italian hung - and I mean by the neck - in effigy. At the time it was a well-received expression of public opinion. I haven't thought about it in years but you ought to know those dummies were works of art. Clothes stuffed with hay, they were, with some kind of hay-stuffed stocking for heads with faces drawn on them. Tojo, the Jap, had big buck teeth and real eyeglasses."

Rambo swung a crutch at me as he rasped, "Now you're talking like one of those commie racist pigs. You asked where I've been - I'll tell you."

"Last year I was dragged off an intelligence-gathering fishing boat in the Baltic and sent to a camp in Siberia. I thought I knew how I was going to suffer - I'd read Solzhenitsyn's books - but he doesn't even scratch the surface of man's inhumanity to man."

Rambo pulled a Diet Pepsi from the cab of the Mazda pickup and squinted as he popped the flip-top cap. He drank deeply.

"You haven't seen poverty until you've gone through Siberia. High school kids--boys and girls..." Rambo belched. "Yes, twenty below and those poor high school kids can't get hats. Red, smarting ears and not a hat among them. Young girls trudged to school through ankle deep snow in thin cardboard slippers. No socks, often as not. There ain't a girl in Russia who owns a nice warm pair of boots."

"The Russians economic system has obviously failed," I agreed.

"I thought I was tough until I saw the Minskie camp guards--every one of them tall, straight and solid muscle. There was no way I could compete with them."

I said, "I didn't know Russians were known for being rugged."

Rambo threw the Pepsi can back into the cab of the truck and shrugged his shoulders. "I was talking about the Minskie guards. For several hundred years the Minskie's were slaves down in southern Russia. And throughout recorded history whenever a culture has owned slaves they've tried to improve their quality through selective breeding. Wherever possible, only the strongest, best built male slaves were permitted to father children."

"Thomas Jefferson would never have permitted that to happen here," I hissed.

"Anyway, it only took a couple of hundred years of selectively breeding Minskie to produce someboys that I simply can't keep up with."

"You said camp life was bad."

"Inhuman. I'm reporting the Rusksies to the World Human Rights Commission." Rambo shook his crutches at me. "I'm going to need these for a long time."

"The rack? Beatings?"

Rambo grunted, "I've seen worse. When it was 20 below they'd take a crowd of us up to the top of a snow-covered mountain and strap long skinny boards on our feet. Anyone who made it to the bottom was put in a little chair and brought back to the top to do it over and over again."

Selectmen take on Jane Fonda issue

by Bill Conlon

Jane Fonda?

What does Tewksbury have to do with Jane Fonda?

Enough, apparently, to prompt the town's board of selectmen to issue a letter of support for the city of Holyoke in that community's efforts to keep Miss Fonda out.

Holyoke raised a ruckus when it was learned that Jane Fonda would be coming to town to shoot a movie. It seems that Holyoke officials remember only too well Miss Fonda's 1972 trip to Hanoi in support of North Vietnam during the hostilities there, and they didn't want her visiting Holyoke.

Tewksbury Selectman Chairman

Bill Hallisey, citing a note received from a Vietnam Veterans organization, said Fonda made a big mistake in "trying to make a name for herself" with the visit to Hanoi. Hallisey then asked for a letter of support for Holyoke, and the board backed him.

Selectman Paul Sullivan said he disagreed with idea, but expressed a basic support for Holyoke.

"I'm very reluctant to get the selectmen involved in foreign policy," Sullivan told the board. "We have enough to argue about already."

The final vote to send the letter of support to Holyoke was 4-1, with Sullivan abstaining.

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

As you may know, Federal Realty Trust has proposed a four-lot subdivision with new roadway construction off Woburn Street, opposite Federal Street. During the past few months, at various public hearings, many neighbors have expressed concerns about drainage, traffic, and, for some, a general opposition to the development. As a Wilmington based firm with strong community ties, we have decided to attempt to address these concerns. With your help, this will be possible; without it, it's not worth the effort.

As of this date, our engineering studies show no basis for concerns over drainage produced by any increase in the rate of run-off from the proposed subdivision. Part of the general opposition to the project seems to stem from the construction of the roadway, and the density of houses. Although the density falls well within the applicable zoning for the area, we recognize the esthetic preferences of abutters. As such, we hereby submit an alternative proposal, which would decrease the density of the project, and preclude the need for standard roadway construction.

Our proposal will seek two lots in the rear of the property, serviced by one "common driveway," each with road frontage (Woburn Street) of 20 feet. Each rear lot would have an area well in excess of one acre. In addition, the proposal seeks to retain the existing structure (No. 520 Woburn Street), in a relocated position on a lot that would have 67.50 feet of road frontage on Woburn Street, and an area in excess of 23,000 square feet. (Please refer to enclosed study plan). The two rear lots would resemble "Hammerhead Lots" which are currently permitted in Wilmington. Each of these lots would require Board of Appeals approval.

Thank you for your interest in this matter. Should you have any questions, please call.

Sincerely,
Federal Realty Trust
Joseph P. Casey, Trustee

LWV looks at Regional Vocational School Committee

This is the sixth in a series of articles presented by the League of Women Voters of Wilmington in preparation for "Meet Your Town Officials," a public reception to be held in the spring. The League hopes that these articles will not only help to make the public more comfortable discussing issues with officials attending the event, but will encourage the informed participation of our citizens in town government.

The Regional Vocational School Committee consists of 10 non-paid members popularly elected to serve three year terms. Two representatives serve each of the five towns that comprise the region (Wilmington, Tewksbury, Billerica, Burlington and Bedford). The principal objective of the committee is to provide both comprehensive vocational/technical experience and academic education to approximately 1400 secondary high school students residing in the region. There are currently 21 programs of study offered. Evening and summer programs offering a variety of courses are also available affording students and adults further opportunities to investigate career potentials.

The primary function of the Committee is to prepare the budget and secure its passage through each of the five town meetings. Preparation of the budget is done with input from the Selectmen and Finance Committees of the region and the general public in open budget hearings. Costs are apportioned to each community on the basis of percentage of students enrolled with some reimbursement from state funds. The percentage of state reimbursement was recently increased to 35 percent with the signing of the "Vote aid" bill. In addition to preparation and passage of the budget, the Committee is responsible for the hiring of personnel, determination of salaries, negotiation of contracts with department employees and the establishment of curricula.

Issues are decided by majority vote of the Committee in meetings which are open to the public. Meetings are held every other Tuesday, as posted, at 7:30 p.m. in the Committee Room of the Shawshen Valley Regional Vocational Technical High School at 100 Cook St., Billerica.

25 years ago

The February 14, 1963 edition of the Town Crier of Wilmington noted that:

Three members of the Wilmington Firefighters' Association, represented by William "Agreeable" Smith met with the Board of Selectmen Monday night to ask that call firefighters, currently being paid $1.65 per hour be raised to $2.00.

They complained that three letters written a year ago had gone unanswered. Mr. Melzar, Acting Town Manager explained that there were two classes of call men and further explained the delay in answering the requests...he agreed however, that the current pay rate "is not conducive to encouraging men to become call firemen."

Ladies of the Federal Gardens area called on both the finance committee and planning board to present arguments for a pedway from Federal Street to the Wildwood School. Flora Kasabowski was present on both occasions as an interested citizen.

Samuel Shapiro, president of a new Sweetheart Plastic Inc. was one of those elected to the Board of Directors of the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce. Others elected to serve were Frank Griffin of Church Street Hardware;

Bennett Bedell, Bedell Insurance; John Cafiso, Silver Lake Hardware; Allick Epstein, Louie's Oil; Don Greer, J.W. Greer Co., Mrs. Lillian Woodside, Wilmington Center Pharmacy.

Christine Anderson of Shawshen Avenue and Frank Ingram of Wing Road were chosen king and queen of the Valentine Ball at the Methodist Church. Their attendants were Glenn Milley, James Justice, Bruce Kirby, Martha Fiske, Susan Prescott and Sharon Justice.

Pat Fiske, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Fiske of Church Street was advised by General Mills that she earned the highest rating in WHS in 1963 search of the firm for the American Homemaker of Tomorrow. She is now eligible for the Betty Crocker State competition. She was awarded a bronze medal.

The more things change - the more they stay the same? Commenting on a mixup in which the Planning Board had been left with no copy of zoning articles for the Town Meeting Warrant, which had to be advertised for two weeks, Danny Gillis and Jeanne Gifford were allegedly somewhat outspoken, - said Dan, "The Board of Selectmen has been asleep for three years and still is!"

Three wagging tails give Dog Officer Ellen Davis lots of job satisfaction, but no help with her health insurance.

Frankly speaking

by Kevin John Sowyrda

It might be a dog of a job, but somebody's got to do it, and apparently Ellen Davis does it best. Appointed animal control officer in March of 1986, Ellen Davis loves her job and her clients -- both dog owners and stray canines alike.

If you've ever seen Ellen in person, it's probably because you've declared war on your neighbor's barking hound. In fact, dogs who are addicted to yelping at the fine hour of 5:00 a.m. are a big part of Ellen's duties. But along with that is the problem common to any community of wandering animals or pets gone astray. It's here that Ellen spends most of her time, shuttling between her home and the local dog pound caring for lost pets.

On call 24 hours a day, seven days a week, Ellen has a new phone line at her house, just for "dog and cat calls". And when she is called out, you'll see her riding along in her official dog officer mobile, complete with yellow strobe lights. With thoughts of her last town car fresh in mind Ellen adds, "This one even runs".

Ellen Davis says her biggest success since taking the $15,500 a year job of animal control officer has been finding homes for a lot of dogs.

"Since I've started we've had to put only two dogs to sleep", says Davis, adding that most dogs find homes because "I harass people to death".

The guys at Wilmington Ford could probably learn something from Ellen's sales tactics. When people visit the local pound to get a pet, Ellen has been known to use any number of sales pitches, including, "That dog would really match your coat".

And though she doesn't exactly work 9 to 5, Ellen earns every penny of her pay check and then some. Between the phone calls and everything else, she averages a 60 hour work week.

But of late, Ellen Davis' biggest obstacle in life hasn't been rabid dogs or lost cats. Instead, it's been living without medical coverage. You see, Ellen is classified by the town as a "contractual employee" and for whatever that's worth it means that the town doesn't provide her with a health plan. Health insurance has been a big issue this year, and the whole issue is easier to understand when it affects a municipal employee who has served us all well.

As a result, Ellen has a lot more than those "Blue-Cross, Blue-Shield blues" today. Last week she had to have her gallbladder removed. Now recovering at home on Ballardvale Street, Ellen and her husband are facing a $10,000 medical bill, which is more than half of what Ellen makes in an entire year. She already owes a relative money, as New England Memorial wouldn't even admit her without some cash in advance. Simply put, Ellen is one of many Americans who live in fear of illness without health insurance. Now Ellen is facing quite a bit of fear.

"I would like to be a town employee and get the benefits I need for day-to-day living", says Ellen, wondering if she'll have to make a choice between a roof over her head and paying the doctor. So in the very near future, it's more than merited for Wilmington to give Ellen the same medical coverage provided to custodians, police officers, administrators, and others.

In the interim, word has it that a group of town employees has started a fund to help Ellen, who is already itching to get back to work. "If they gave me only three dollars a week, I wouldn't give up my job. I love it. I love those happy endings where dogs find a home and owners find their dogs."

Nursing home neighbors concerned about drainage

by Arlene Surprenant
A group of neighbors angry at missing a continued hearing for the Treetops nursing home proposed for West Street converged on the Conservation Commission Wednesday night to air their concerns. The lengthy discussion coincided with the signing of an Order of Conditions for the project.

Led by outspoken Frank Ouelette, neighbors said they were afraid drainage problems would increase on Westdale Avenue were the nursing home to be built. Ouelette told of ongoing problems he had had with former property owner John Elia. He said in the past a ditch dug by Elia to drain his property caused water to back up onto adjacent lands. He wanted assurance that abutters' property wouldn't be affected by the project. He also asked what recourse neighbors had now that Northgate Healthcare Services was being given the green light to move ahead.

Board members said it would have been better if neighbors had expressed their concerns earlier but, with a 21 day time frame to issue an Order of Conditions, their hands were tied. They said one recourse was to appeal to the state within ten days of the issuance of the Order of Conditions and to hire an engineer to do re-calculations.

"It's a rotten deal," claimed Ouelette, who said he was unhappy that the continued hearing on January 20 "snuck by" despite his efforts to keep track of meeting dates. Ouelette told the board flooding problems increased in April and the key to the whole drainage problem in his area was a culvert at the end of Westdale Avenue. Chairman Chester Bruce said his board could work with the DPW to keep drains and culverts clean.

After listening patiently, neighbor Jack Moore said he would "just like to go away with the feeling that the voice of all citizens would be protected."

Commission members said proponents of the nursing home had given satisfactory answers to all questions raised and the engineer had worked out a plan that would include three retention ponds for excess water and zero runoff off site.

"You have real concerns; I know you do. I don't know how we can address them though without engineers (present)," said Don Ugolini.

When neighbors asked if their present flooding problems could be alleviated, Bruce explained the board would need more information and it would be difficult to rectify what was done in the past.

"If you have a problem now, you're going to have a problem. I can't take that away," said Bruce, adding that his board could make sure, however, that the proposed nursing home won't aggravate those problems further.

In other business, members agreed to continue a hearing on the Whitefield Elm Village subdivision off Andover Street to March 2. They said they needed more time to review the replication plan, gather more information, and do a site walk of the property, which is being eyed by the Massachusetts Water Resource Authority for a sludge facility.

Bruce told engineer Janet Bernardo in future he would like such things as replication plans brought in earlier to give the board ample time for review and a chance to look at the whole subdivision plan instead of just roadways where filling of wetlands will take place.

Concom explores status of associate members

Erickson named to certification board

Wilmington Health Director Greg Erickson has recently been appointed to the Board of Certification of Health Officers by Governor Michael Dukakis. Erickson has been recognized through other state appointments as well in the past year.

Part of Erickson's new job will be to help administer the state health officer's exam on February 25.

Erickson told the Town Crier he is pleased with the recognition and the chance to meet others in his field. He said the contacts he makes helps him professionally and, in the long run, benefits the town.

The Wilmington Conservation Commission is currently exploring the idea of having associate members on its board. Though they would have no voting power, associate members would help with research, go on site walks, and sit in on board meetings. To date, there are technically two associate members but no policy governing their actions.

At last Wednesday's meeting, commission members went over suggested guidelines in appointing approximately five associates. They felt the positions should be advertised and associates should be registered voters who have some free time and are willing to serve their town.

Conservation Administrator Libby Sabounjian brought up the issue of liability. She said associates, unlike town employees, would not be covered by insurance should something happen to them while acting for the board. Sabounjian also told the Town Crier that some towns have associates who train with voting members. These associates then become part of a pool to draw from in making future appointments to the commission.

The whole issue will be brought up again at future board meetings.

Wilmington school news

North Intermediate
 The North Intermediate PAC has rescheduled its February 4 meeting to March 1 at 7 p.m. Guest speaker for the evening will be Assistant Superintendent of schools Henry Dembrowski.

All students, parents, and family members are invited to join in the fun at the February 18 roller skating party. Roller World in Saugus will host the party from 6 to 8 p.m. Tickets are on sale at the school through Friday.

Reminders:

All fundraiser order forms must be turned in to the school by February 22. Profits from the candy sale will go toward the eighth grade field trip in June and sixth and seventh grade activities throughout the year.

Parents are urged to return the bus survey sheets from Mr. Dembrowski as well as the sixth grade survey sheets as soon as possible.

Kidsplace
 What can you buy for a penny these days? Plenty, if you're referring to the 350,000 pounds of gravel needed for the base of the Kidsplace playground.

All elementary students in Wilmington are asked to participate in a unique fundraiser to help make the Kidsplace dream become a reality. Children are encouraged to take their pennies to their school auditorium on a daily basis. The pennies will be put in penny holder jugs decorated with dinosaurs. The money will help pay for the gravel, which costs a penny a pound.

All donations should be accompanied by parents' signatures. It is hoped the children will feel as though they are a part of the stepped-up efforts to raise $40,000 for Kidsplace, which will be built in June.

Woburn Street School
 Artist of the week is Michael Wolley from Miss Gamble's third grade class.

Woburn Street School will be participating in the Wilmington kindergarten registration to take place the first week in March.

On Friday, Feb. 5, the PAC-sponsored mother and son dinner was held. Everyone had a great time and would like to thank all the mothers and fathers who volunteered to make both father and daughter and mother and son dinners such a big success.

Thank you to Bobby Spencer, juvenile officer from the Wilmington Police Department for his participation with the fifth graders in the DARE Program. It is hoped everyone enjoyed the celebration held Monday, Feb. 8.

Note: Please take any news for this column to the Town Crier office by Monday evenings. Or you may call Arlene Surprenant, 658-5696.

Sweet Adelines in new home

by Arlene Surprenant
 When you share an evening with the Merrimack Valley Chapter of Sweet Adelines, you're in for a treat. This 60 member amateur choral group harmonizes in vintage barbershop style, to the delight of audiences young and old.

On Thursday, February 11 at 7:30 p.m., Wilmington residents are invited to a guest night rehearsal of the Sweet Adelines at their new home in the Wilmington Arts Center. The Sweet Adelines moved from their old residence in Andover to their new quarters on Middlesex Avenue on January 31.

"We're very pleased that we moved to Wilmington," Director Karen Mozykowski told the Town Crier last week. "We like being associated with the Council for the Arts. There's a whole different feeling because they're interested in promoting quality arts," she said.

At least four of the members -- Elaine Tucker, Jessie Fanjoy, Hilda Crescitelli, and Jean Nelson -- come from Wilmington. Others are welcome to join the organization. Mozykowski said the only requirement is an ability to sing and carry your own part. New members are given a six week audition period.

The Merrimack Valley Chapter of Sweet Adelines is only one of 24 regional chapters across the United States. There are a total of 3,200 international members and the 60 local members come from as far away as Rockport and Lincoln, New Hampshire.

The local chapter had its inception in 1974. The purpose of the group is to provide high caliber musical performances and give members a chance to improve their own vocal skills. The highlight of the past 14 years came in 1985, when the Merrimack Valley Chapter earned the title of regional, champs in competition against other chapters and had a chance to compete on an international level in Philadelphia.

Besides a yearly competition, members also put on an annual show. This year's show will be held at Reading High School on November 11 and 12. The show will feature choral renditions, individual numbers, and a performance by an outside comedy quartet.

In return for rehearsal space in the Wilmington Arts Center, the Sweet Adelines will also hold a special concert during the year, with proceeds going to further the work of the Wilmington Council for the Arts.

Keith Corbin, acting debut

Keith Corbin, 11-year-old son of Victor and Janice Corbin of Tewksbury, will make his acting debut as a lead player in the Tewksbury Little Theatre Group production "Escape to the Blue Planet" directed by Sal Salamone and featuring Brian Krueger, LaShanta Magnusson, and Susan Sganga.

Keith will act and dance the role of Magnate, the Ultimate Villain.

New members may register for this March production Sunday afternoon February 29 between 3 and 5 at the Tewksbury Little Theatre in the Fellowship Hall of the Tewksbury United Methodist Church and Main Street.

Noisy, but necessary

It takes a firm touch, and a jackhammer, to dig through frozen ground in winter. Stephen Spinoza, seen here working at the Tewksbury cemetery on East Street, said the top eight to fifteen inches of soil are rock solid this time of year, requiring a jackhammer, but the dirt underneath is unfrozen.

Home for autistic children given selectmen's blessing

by Arlene Surprenant
A three year search for land for a home for autistic children has ended. Peter Troy and Steve Anderson of the May Institute told Wilmington selectmen Monday night they have narrowed their choice to two parcels of town owned land: a 1.88 acre site on Houghton Road or a 1.25 acre site on John Street off Burlington Avenue.

The two men said after looking at eight or nine town owned sites, these seemed to be the best available. They asked selectmen to help draft an article for the annual town meeting to transfer the land to the Wilmington Housing Authority, whose members are helping with the project.

The men propose the construction of a single family home using state funds which have already been set aside for the project. The home would accommodate one couple and six autistic children who would benefit from living in a family environment. A similar home was constructed by the May Institute in Chatham. The men said neighbors there had given "very, very positive ratings" to the residence.

Selectmen said they would help as much as possible to get the project underway. Troy said between now and April he and Anderson would meet with abutters and have perc tests done to make sure the sites are buildable.

Dance & auction at Tewks KofC

Tewksbury Knights of Columbus will hold a Valentines Dance and Chinese auction on Saturday, Feb. 13, beginning at 7 p.m.

According to Dan Morris, there will be a "surprise auctioneer" on hand to conduct the Chinese auction after a hot chicken buffet dinner is served at 8:30 p.m. sharp.

Each couple is asked to bring a wrapped gift of no more than $10 value for the auction, which involves bidding on unseen items.

A donation of $5 per person is asked, and the public is invited to attend. For further information contact Dan Morris at 851-8157 or the K of C hall at 658-6342.

Eighth graders visit Tech

Eighth graders from Wilmington and the other four towns in the regional school district had a chance to explore various shops at the Shawsheen Tech open house on Sunday.

Students interested in attending the school, as well as their parents, had an opportunity to gain hands on experience in such shops as carpentry, auto body, and data processing.

The Open House ran from 1 to 4 p.m. At that time, light refreshments were served and shop instructors and administrators were available to answer questions on an individual basis. Reportedly, close to 400 people took advantage of the chance to see the school first hand.

Tech School committeeman

Kevin Sowyrda was pleased with the response.

"We're marketing what we have better than ever because we have to with declining enrollment," Sowyrda said Tuesday. He added his committee feels that literally opening the doors to the public is an "ideal way to help parents and students make a decision on where to go to school."

Tech student nominated as state's outstanding voke student

Forty-one high school students have been nominated for a statewide award as the "Outstanding Vocational-Technical Student" in Massachusetts. Five winners will be announced at a dinner at Mechanics Hall, Worcester, an event that will culminate National Vocational Education Week, February 7-13. All school finalists will be recognized at the dinner, which is expected to draw more than 500 vocational educators, school committee representatives, and nominees and their guests throughout the Commonwealth.

"These outstanding students represent vocational-technical education at its very best and, of course, we in the educational community are extremely proud of their achievements," said Elaine Cadigan, director, Bureau of Program Services for the Division of Occupational Education. "Their impressive and eclectic range of accomplishments epitomizes the competitive edge provided by vocational-technical schools throughout Massachusetts."

Locally, the nominee is David MacElhiney, a senior in the graphic arts program at Shawshen Valley Technical High School. A member of Vocational Industrial Clubs of America (VICA), David won a bronze medal in the VICA District competition for his talent in graphic arts, his chosen field of study at Shawshen Tech.

Described as a "craftsman and a scholar" by his guidance counselor, Dan Trainor, David has been active in both school activities and those related to his chosen career. His grades rank him at No. 2 in his class.

He has been a member of the soccer team, Drama Club, Printers' Devils Club, Yearbook Committee and school newspaper, "Ram Page." He received a citizenship award for science and graphic arts, was named Student of the Month this past October; participated in Student Government Day at the State House last spring; and served as president of the Junior Craftsman Club. David enjoys skiing, hiking, basketball, soccer and hockey.

Interested in continuing his education in printing systems management and engineering, David is now gaining real-world work experience at KNS Press, Woburn, a firm that participates in Shawshen's co-op program.

Selection of nominees was based on academic and technical competence, attendance, leadership, vocational related work experience, extracurricular activities and community involvement. The five statewide winners will receive monetary Awards of Excellence.

"Vocational Education - The Competitive Edge" is the theme for National Vocational Education Week. In addition to the selection of the Outstanding Vocational-Technical students, a variety of celebrations will take place in the 26 regional vocational technical school districts, the 15 city or town vocational-technical schools and programs, and the 14 comprehensive high schools that offer vocational training. Many schools are holding open houses, to show how vocationally trained students can gain the competitive edge by adding job training to their academic pursuits at the high school level.

During open houses, shops will be in operation, with students demonstrating skills and staff available to answer questions parents and students may have about this option for high school. Schools are offering tours, special programs for eighth graders and their parents, and handouts about career opportunities through technical training.

Several facilities are setting up displays at shopping malls, where students and teachers will be on hand to discuss programs. Billboards in Dedham, Quincy and three other locations will tell commuters about the benefits of vocational/technical training. Boston Edison customers will read facts about vocational education, which will be placed in billing statements, and Boston Edison storefronts in Boston, Framingham and Dedham will seek to heighten awareness of vocational training.

Vocational/technical education in United States enrolls twice as many people today as all the four year colleges and universities combined. Three out of every four jobs in business and industry require vocational and technical training below the college level.

In Massachusetts, more than 350,000 people are enrolled in public vocational education programs. (Nationally, the figure is almost 16 million.) In 1986, over 92 percent of the graduates were placed in jobs or further education. Vocational/technical high schools in Massachusetts have the faculty and facilities to provide state-of-the-art training in more than 125 technical high demand occupations.

Graduates of vocational/technical programs receive not only a certificate of proficiency in the trade for which they trained, but a high school diploma which enables them to go on to both two and four year colleges. With both a vocation and a diploma, students have a number of choices for their future, giving them a "competitive edge."

rose to 1.69 percent up from 1.52 percent in 1986. Improvements over the comparable period of 1986 included, on a pre tax basis, an increase in net interest income to $11.7 million in 1987 from $9.9 million in 1986 and an increase in gains from the sale of investment securities to $944 thousand in 1987 from $595 thousand in 1986.

The corporation also reported the repurchase of 508,949 shares of outstanding capital stock during 1987, which helped to improve the book value of the remaining shares outstanding from $24.04 on December 31, 1987.

Diamond Crystal reports earnings

Diamond Crystal Salt Company's consolidated sales were higher, but net income was lower, for the third quarter of its current fiscal year which ends March 31, 1988, compared to the same quarter last year, according to Roy Satchell, president and chief executive officer.

Net sales in the quarter for Diamond Crystal Specialty Foods, Inc., headquartered in Wilmington, were essentially flat compared to last year as increased sales of disposal shakers and meal kits offset lower sales of salt and pepper packets. Operating earnings for the quarter were down from last year as a result of unfavorable product mix and expenses associated with the start up of Nutra Care International, a new venture in which Specialty Foods has acquired a 51 percent interest.

Earnings were also impacted this year by lower interest income and an increase in losses sustained by St. Clair Underground Storage, a partnership in which the company holds an interest. In addition, the estimated federal income tax rate for the current year has increased as a result of the impact of new alternative minimum tax rules.

Diamond Crystal Specialty Foods, Inc., which manufactures individual food condiment packets, low sodium dietary products and meal service kits, has its headquarters and a plant in Wilmington, and a plant in Moore, Okla.

Program to explain 'Dogs for the hearing-impaired'

Articles for the auction should be taken at 10. Helen Noonan and her committee will serve luncheon at noon with a business meeting to follow.

An interesting program is scheduled for the afternoon. The Red Acre Farm from Stow will present "Dogs for the Hearing Impaired." Red Acre Farm, Inc. was founded in 1903 as a home for old horses. Its aim is to start and continue projects geared to preventing suffering in humans as well as animals.

Originated in Denver, Colorado, a program to train dogs to react to specific sounds and thereby help meet some of the needs of the hearing impaired soon outgrew its facilities. In 1981, the American Humane authorities decided to expand its service and Red Acre Farm was selected as its new site. Red Acre Farm now serves most of the United States. Members may take guests to this meeting.

House on Glen Road is former Town Hall

Copyright © 1988 by Capt. Larz Neilson
On the east side of Glen Road in Wilmington, near Middlesex Avenue is a small home, one story. Seventy years ago it was named "Camp Hope." A little old lady, name unknown, lived there alone. Her amusement came from an ancient gramophone, with a horn of built-up panels of colored glass.

The writer and his sister used to stop in and visit that lady every Sunday on the way home from Sunday School.

The building dates back to before the Civil War. Possibly it dates back to the era of the War of 1812. It was a part of the property of the Blanchard family, descendants of the sergeant of the Wilmington Minutemen, later Colonel William Blanchard.

In 1864 one could joke that the small building was a part of "the center." The Congregational Church stood 100 yards easterly, and across Middlesex Avenue was the Free Will Baptist Church, at that time a vacant building. There were two bakeries, belonging to the Bond Bakers, and several of the old buildings of today were standing at that time.

The Bond Bakeries product was a large cracker, which was sold from brightly colored wagons, all over New England. Capt. Joseph Bond, who had served in the Revolutionary Army, moved into Wilmington in 1795, and built a home which today is the Congregational Parsonage.

He built a bakery several hundred feet northerly of what is now the parsonage, and another one a little further away, southwesterly, at about the present site of the Baptist Church. The first of those two is today marked by an empty cellar, with granolithic stones.

Anyway, for more than a century and a half that little building was a part of the Blanchard estate, through a succession of owners.

During the evening of February 15, 1864 several things were happening. In the Congregational Church vestry a magician was having a show. Mr. Poole, the superintendent of the bakery, was not present. He was in Reading, taking part in a musical concert.

Minuteman menu

Week of February 15
North Congregational Church, Main St., Woburn. Call 933-8643 for reservations.

Transportation is available on some of the days, especially for handicapped people.

Monday: Washington's Birthday, site closed.

Tuesday: Rotini with meat sauce, grated cheese, crusty roll, Tuscany vegetable, hermit, juice or chilled fruit.

Wednesday: Baked fish, lemon butter, broccoli florets, cheese sauce, rice pilaf, crackwheat, citrus or lemon dessert.

Thursday: Oven fried chicken with cranberry sauce, mashed potatoes, creamed corn, biscuit, purple plums.

Friday: Seafood stew, peas, rice, fry bread, pear brown betty, or fresh fruit.

Sometime during that evening the easterly of the two bakeries caught fire. Sparks flew over, carried by a southeasterly breeze, and lodged among the shingles in the steeple of the church.

There was no fire apparatus in town. A young fellow named Ed Nichols (many years later the Town Clerk) drove Poole's fast horse to Reading. Poole went home as fast as he could, and Nichols drove Poole's team to North Woburn to get fire apparatus.

By the time Ed Nichols and the fire apparatus had arrived in Wilmington the church had burned down. Neighbors and parishioners had saved the pulpit and the pews, including one that was behind the pulpit for the minister. That pulpit, and that pew are in the present day church.

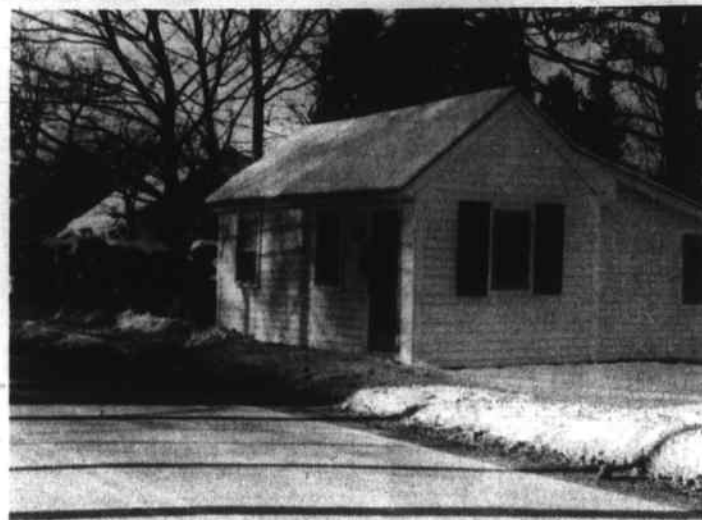

They also saved the town records. The basement of that church was the Town Hall.

Those town records were placed in the little building beside Glen Road, and for about two years that building was the Town Hall.

Beside it, already constructed, it is to be believed, was a stone "pound," the place where run-away horses and other animals were kept until properly claimed.

Two years after the fire, on Feb. 15, 1866 the people of the Congregational Church moved into their newly constructed church.

Whether or not the Town Hall

Old Town Hall

This building, in 1864 was the Town Hall of Wilmington. Beyond it is the stone wall that constituted the town pound, in which run away animals were kept.

records were moved at the same time is not known. It is entirely possible that they had been moved into what had been the Baptist Church.

A few years later that building was known as the Town Hall, and in 1876 a photograph of the senior class was taken, the pupils standing on the front steps. It was then both a town hall and a high school.

On January fifth of this year the Wilmington Planning Board signed a plan, showing that little building, and the old town pound as a separate house lot. The lot has 20,000 square feet, and conforms in all respects to the Wilmington zoning bylaws.

Presumably, if someone cares, that someone can now buy an old town hall, in which to live, and have next door a stone "town pound" about which that person can yarn and talk with visitors.

Over 65?

The Internal Revenue Services says that if you are 65 or older you may take an additional standard deduction because of your age on your tax return for 1987. The additional amount you can take is $750 if single and $600 for a married individual. If your spouse is also 65 or older and you are filing a joint return you can claim two additional amounts. We are considered 65 on the day before our 65 birthday by the IRS.

The total standard deduction for a single individual age 65 is therefore $3,750 (if blind and 65 it is $4,500). For a married couple filing a joint return with one spouse 65 or older it is $5,600. If both are 65 it is $6,200. The amount is higher if one or both are blind. There are other benefits for the older taxpayer. Call the IRS 1-800-424-3676 and order publication 554 "Tax Information for Older Americans."

Fuel assistance

The time to file for fuel assistance will be closing out very soon. Those having a difficult time paying fuel bills and feel they may be eligible should call the Center at 657-7595 for information.

Center closed Monday
Monday, Feb. 15, Washington's Birthday, the Center will be closed. Please make appointments accordingly as the minibus will not be on the road. The 15th is also the first day of the school vacation for the school children. No meals will be delivered or served. If you are receiving a delivered meal and will have no one to prepare a meal for you on the vacation week, you may double up on your meals this week to cover you until the program resumes when school opens.

Social closed out

The February therapeutic social has been closed out. We will be starting a waiting list if you failed to sign up when registration was open. We do ask any senior who signed up and feels he or she will not be able to attend to let us know by calling the Center as soon as possible. We can let a person on the waiting list take your place.

Activity programs

The activity programs are increasing in participation by the seniors but we will make room for any senior who wants to join any class.

The exercise class is held Monday from 10 to 11 a.m., the instructor filling in for Nancy had to change the Wednesday class to Thursday morning from 10 to 11.

On Tuesday the popular ceramic class is held;

Thursday the seniors dance throughout the afternoon. Friday they try their luck at bingo a very popular activity.

Let's not forget the walkers, swimmers and bowlers, leaving from the center or meet at Shawsheen Tech or North Reading Candlepin Lanes. We all need physical and mental activity to keep us well, and these programs are just the prescription on a doctor's orders.

Dance performance

Tuesday, Feb. 16 the students of Lorraine Spada's Dance School will be performing in the function room at 10 a.m. Seniors are encouraged to be on hand.

Camp Forty Acres -- A camp for all children

Copyright © 1988 by Capt. Larz Neilson

People on snowmobiles and all-terrain vehicles are the bane of Camp Forty Acres at this time. Many of those who trespass into the Forty Acre Youth Camp in North Wilmington do not damage or destroy property, but there are those who do.

Camp Forty Acres is the popular name for Wilmington Youth Camps, Inc. It was incorporated in December 1948, and has, since that day, been used by Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and other organizations of young people from Wilmington and from other communities.

Wilmington Youth Camps is run by a board of directors, who have an over-all supervisory capacity and by one appointed person who oversees, in a sense, the daily activities. All groups that use the camp are supposed to do so with the permission of that appointed person.

Boy Scout troops from the Greater Lowell Council have, from time-to-time had camping experiences in the area. Several weeks each summer are reserved for an organization which provides care for youngsters.

The history of Camp Forty Acres is worthy of a few remarks.

Foster B. Balsar became scoutmaster of Troop 1, Wilmington Boy Scouts back in the days before the United States was involved in World War II. He served in the U.S. Army during that war, and then returned to again become Scoutmaster of the troop.

Some person, unknown to this writer, owned 40 acres of land in North Wilmington and became tired of having to pay taxes. He declared that if he could find someone who would accept ownership of the land he would give that person the property. He was told the Boy Scouts might like it, and that led him to Foster Balsar.

Balsar said he would not accept ownership for himself, and further he insisted if the property was to be given that a token payment should be made.

For the Boy Scouts of Wilmington Balsar made a payment of $1.

Then Balsar consulted a number of persons who perhaps would be interested. It was not difficult to find a half dozen such men.

Philip B. Buzzell had been Scoutmaster of Troop 1 over 30 years previously. He was the Town Counsel of Wilmington, and an attorney of note. He readily accepted, and drew up papers of incorporation for the organization.

Others who were the directors of the Wilmington Youth Camps on that seventh day of December 1948, when it was incorporated were George C. Kambour, Guy E. Nichols, Herbert Higginbotham, Frank J. Hadley and Ralph B. Odiome, these of course in addition to Buzzell and Balsar. All were well known Wilmington residents.

George Kambour was the principal of Wilmington High School and the others were patriotic persons willing to help the young people of Wilmington. All, with the exception of Balsar, are now deceased.

The declared purpose of Wilmington Youth Camps, Inc. was "to foster, encourage and promote the young people's activities and programs, especially in the town of Wilmington, Massachusetts, and in general to foster, encourage and promote educational, athletic, social and patriotic activities among the boys and girls and young people of said town and its vicinity; and to acquire, purchase, erect, improve, lease, mortgage, maintain, sell and exchange such real and personal property as may be necessary or appropriate for the purposes of this corporation.

"No income or profits of this corporation shall be divided among the members or be used or appropriated for other than literary, educational, benevolent, charitable, scientific or religious purposes."

Camp Forty Acres is a region of oak and other trees. There are other areas surrounding Camp Forty Acres which are also to be defined as oak forests. But just over the town line in Andover a number of homes have been constructed in recent years. A stonewall, dating back to the hops growing era (1790 to 1820 plus) is, in great part, the nearly dividing line between Andover and Wilmington.

The camp, which is exactly 40 acres in area, lies about a quarter of a mile westerly (as the crow flies) from Woburn Street in Andover. Woburn Street, like Andover Street in Wilmington, is a road which dates back to about 1635, the ancient colonial road between Andover and Boston.

There is a right-of-way in from Woburn Street, a right-of-way which has existed for about three-quarters of a century, and possibly twice as long. That right-of-way serves two tracts of land, the second tract being southerly of Camp Forty Acres.

Back in the early days of the camp, back in the 1950s, when what is now Route 93 was being projected, some suburban Boston speculators tried to purchase the southerly land in the area, for the purpose of starting gravel apits. The gravel would be sold to the contractors who would be constructing 93. A fortune could be made, if successful.

Those speculators set up a 24 hour blockade in the entrance to Forty Acres. They believed that by so doing anyone else could be prohibited from using that right-of-way.

Friends of Forty Acres went to Philip Buzzell, in a mood of alarm. They did not want anyone to block egress to their camping ground.

Buzzell assured them that nothing could happen. When he prepared the incorporation papers for Wilmington Youth Camps he had also filed the necessary documents which proved legally the existence of that right-of-way, from Woburn Street to Camp Forty Acres.

That legal proof is just as good today as it was in the early 1950s.

Foster Balser started Camp Forty Acres

Copyright © 1988 by Capt. Larz Neilson

There are many persons who have given of their time, to make Camp Forty Acres in North Wilmington a place to which the youth of the area could go for clean, outdoor fun.

First on the list is Foster B. Balsar. He became a resident of Wilmington some time in the 1930s, when his parents moved into a home on West Street. It was he who rejuvenated Troop 1, Wilmington Boy Scouts, at the request of some local youths.

Foster Balsar, it would seem, has a national record of sorts, as a scoutmaster. There were, for perhaps several years, about 100 scouts in Troop 1, while he was its scoutmaster. It seems that no other organization in Wilmington, at that time was willing to sponsor a troop of Boy Scouts, other than the Congregational Church.

Balsar divided the troop into sections, and had assistant scout masters to run each section.

Among those who were assistant scout masters were Dudley Buck, who eventually became scoutmaster of Troop II, at the Methodist Church; Harold Smith, of the Smith Pump Company; Phillip Denner of Chestnut Street; Herbert Higginbotham of Chestnut Street, who became an Eagle Scout; Alfred Swenson of Adams Street, also an Eagle Scout; and Irving Rice of Thurston Avenue, also an Eagle Scout.

Balsar became a scout commissioner, in the Greater Lowell Council of Boy Scouts, and served in several other capacities as well. As a guess one can say he put in about 40 years of volunteer work in scouting and in the operation of Camp Forty Acres.

Board of Directors

Evelyn Kaminski had a pack with 128 Cub Scouts

Evelyn Kaminski of Fairmeadow Road, Wilmington is a lady who could have her picture grace any Boy Scout calendar.

At about the time that Foster Balsar was running a 100 Scout troop of Boy Scouts Evelyn was running a Cub Scout Pack of about 128 Cub Scouts. Like the Boy Scout Troop, the Cub Scout Pack was sponsored by the Congregational Church, and for exactly the same reason.

Winthrop Polsey of Chestnut Street was the Pack Master. Winthrop was a man who had his hands full as a result.

His right hand woman was Evvy, as she was called. Winthrop and Evvy were in effect running four or five Pack meetings a week, and were doing a fine job of it.

Eventually, both in the case of Troop 1, Boy Scouts and the Cub Pack, there was a division process. It is said that the National Council of Boy Scouts of America was behind that division, as a motivating force.

The Boy Scout Troop was divided into three parts, one of which was sponsored by the Methodist Church and the other by the Silver Lake Betterment Association, Johnny McAndrews, scoutmaster.

Johnny, who was a truck driver for the J.J. Cronin Company, was a real worker for Boy Scouts. He put in a lot of time improving Camp Forty Acres, just as he put in a lot of time with his scout troop.

The Cub Scout Pack was also divided, with possibly different sponsors. Evvy became the den mother for a pack at St. Dorothy's Church, and the scoutmaster was her husband, Walter.

Walter, incidentally, was an Eagle Scout, the highest rank in scouting. Two scouts in that troop also became Eagles, and they were sons of Walter and Evvy.

Dudley Buck was a master storyteller

Dudley A. Buck, who was the scoutmaster of what was Troop II and became Troop 57, was the only person who lived in Wilmington to ever get his picture in Life Magazine.

Dudley, who had earned a doctorate at M.I.T., had invented what he called a Cyrotron, a mini-mini micro computer which operated at a temperature of about three degrees above Absolute Zero.

This was before the computer age had occurred. M.I.T. had a computer which took up several rooms, and it was proud of it. For Dudley to invent a computer the basis of which could be easily hidden in the palm of his hand was really a tremendous event.

Born in San Francisco, and raised on a "stump ranch" on an island in the Puget Sound, Dudley came East about 1953, and promptly became an Assistant Scout Master of Troop 1. He bought a home on Sprucewood Road. He became a Lay Preacher in the Methodist Church. He helped conduct Troop I, and he played an active part in the business of Camp Forty Acres.

In 1959, 32 years old, he was one of the men who could be termed a "top scientist" in the United States. Tremendously busy he never

Dudley A. Buck

A broken piece of gear was the only prop.

Dudley, in an Irish brogue that would have done any native Dubliner proud, told the tale of an Irish lad who had to find the other part of that broken gear. It must have taken nearly an hour to tell the story, Dudley and Walter in conversation, one with the other.

There were 25 or 30 scouts, sitting around that campfire. They were speechless. They just sat and listened.

It was a story of Dudley crossing the Atlantic in a submarine. The tale went on and on. That submarine ascended the Ipswich River, and finally arrived at Camp Forty Acres.

There, by a miracle, Walter Rogers found, in the nearby bushes, the other part of that broken gear. By some kind of miracle the two parts exactly fitted, and that told the tale.

The bearer of that Irish brogue was then allowed to return to Ireland, presumably in that same submarine.

Dudley went to work one day in 1959 when he should have stayed home in bed. He had a cold. He went in again the next day.

It was thus that he died, on May 21, 1959.

There will probably never be another Dudley Buck.

Redmen roll
past Hillies

The TMHS hockey squad scored early and often Saturday night enroute to a 6-3 tourney clinching victory over the Haverhill Hillies. Next week the TMHS schedule includes showdowns with Wilmington and Chelmsford. The Wildcats kept their tourney hopes alive with a 4-3 win over Dracut Saturday night.

MVC basketball

Wildcats on track, 52-38

The WHS boys' basketball squad just might make things interesting in the MVC's Small School Division. Last week coach Dave Orndorff's squad got back on track with a 52-38 victory over the Dracut Middies.

Senior center Mike Lombard led the way with 20 points and 14 rebounds. Forward Jamie Robichaud hooped 11 points and grabbed four boards for the winners.

Guard Dan Woods also played a solid game with six points, five assists and four steals.

Down the road in Tewksbury, the Redmen are still going after that elusive victory that would clinch the team's first tournament berth in 15 years.

A blowout loss to Billerica was followed by a tough defeat Friday night to a long-range bombing Haverhill squad.

Coach Bob Melillo's Redmen have slipped from their first place perch in the Small School Division at 5-4, but their 11-4 overall slate is still impressive enough to make TMHS a factor in tournament play.

River Valley basketball

Girls win seventh straight

The undefeated Wilmington Junior High School girls' basketball team recently won its seventh straight game in River Valley League competition.

The Wildcats were up by 10 points at the half and had to hang on in the final minutes as the Hornets pulled to within four points.

Wilmington offense was sparked by the strong efforts of Jen Rago with 12 points, Lynette Berger with seven and Nicole Ouellette with six.

Good defensive play by Gina DeSantis, Julie MacDonald and Millie Ann Cavanaugh combined with Leah Mazzoni's rebounding, kept the Wildcats in the game.

The Hornets offense centered around an exceptional game by Jen Hickey with 16 points and Cindy Amerault with seven. The Hornets converted only nine of 35 foul shots in a great comeback effort.

The Wildcats are the defending junior girls champions and will be playing in the Wildcat Invitational Tournament at Bentley College March 11, 12 and 13.

Mite B's roll, 11-0

Tewksbury's Mite B-2 West Youth Hockey squad defeated Northern Middlesex, 11-0 last week to remain undefeated.

Brad Columbus scored four goals (46 points for the season). Two goals each were scored by captain Al Trager (five points) and Danny Mahoney (46 points). One goal each was scored by Derek Aldred (five points) and Bobby O'Leary (six points).

Assisting on goals were captain Paul Davoren (20 points) and Jimmy Davos (30 points). David St. Jean notched another shutout and is 7-0 this season.

This team's impressive record of 15 wins and no losses is a direct result of good passing, goaltending and most importantly, teamwork.

Intructional soccer program

The Wilmington Youth Soccer Association will be running an instructional soccer program in the spring for youngsters in kindergarten through third grade. Registration for this program will be at the following date.

Knights of Columbus Hall, 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., Monday, Feb. 22, Thursday, Feb. 25, and Monday, Feb. 29. The addition of third grade youngsters is new for this year.

This program will start April 30, and be run on Saturday mornings at the Shawsheen School for six sessions. The fee will be $10.

The soccer association would like to see more girls participating in the program, especially in the older grades. This is an ideal sport for youngsters, boys and girls, a chance to keep fit, learn team work, and have a lot of fun.

For information about the spring program or the Soccer Association call Vice President Bob Maleszyk at 657-4068 or President John DeMarco at 658-3270.

Top Billerica in finale

Strong finish for WHS girls

The Wilmington High School girls' gymnastics squad scored another impressive victory Monday afternoon, defeating Billerica in Merrimack Valley Conference action, 119.1-112.7.

This win coupled with recent victories over Methuen (109.55-98.50) and North Andover (106.2-103.0) gives coach Karen Lemone's girls a final record of 6-3.

The Methuen win was sparked by the performances of Tracy Greer in the parallel bars (7.05) and the balance beam (7.15).

Wilmington's Donna Mickle finished second in the parallel bars with a 7.05 score, while Susan McNamara (6.6) and Kristine Przyjenski (6.4) also scored well in the balance beam.

Przyjenski was the winner in the vault with a fine score of 8.2. Greer finished in a tie for the fourth position in the vault with a fine 7.55 mark.

Wilmington dominated the floor exercises, with Przyjenski winning with a 7.4 mark and Greer finishing third at 7.25.

The all-round rankings for the Methuen meet read Tracy Greer (29.05), Methuen's Chris Tudisco (28.05), Kristine Przyjenski (27.35) and Methuen's Lisa Fusco (22.00).

The hard-fought victory over North Andover saw Greer and Donna Mickle finishing in a dead heat on the parallel bars with an identical 6.9 score. Przyjenski finished in tie for fourth place at 5.5.

The two top spots in the balance beam went to Kerry Bradshaw (7.8) and Stephanie Tuttle (7.0) before Wilmington's Greer (6.6) and Mickle (6.0) came on strong to score well in this event.

Przyjenski won the vault with an 8.0 score, followed by Tuttle (7.9), Greer (7.8) and Colleen Dunham (7.7).

North Andover took a first in the floor exercises, but Wilmington picked up valuable points thanks to Mickle's (7.3) strong second place effort and the scores of Jodi Demos and Przyjenski with a third place tie at 7.0. Greer tied for the fourth position in this event with a 6.5 score.

The all-round scoring saw Kerry Bradshaw (29.1) leading the field, followed by Tracy Greer (27.8), Stephanie Tuttle (26.9) and Kristine Przyjenski (26.3).

One step
at a time

Wilmington's Tracy Greer moves smoothly along the balance beam in recent MVC action. The girls finished with a solid win over Billerica.

Bay State skiing

What becomes of the competitive, highly-skilled skier when his or her days of racing on the high school and collegiate circuits have ended? Today's masters division skier (21 years and older) has a difficult time creating a niche in the present racing scene, finding challenging and satisfying competition to keep his or her performance at its best during the ski season.

This year the Bay State Winter Games, Massachusetts' own Olympic style sports festival, will recognize and showcase these skiers with a special masters alpine competition in the upcoming Winter Games, March 4, 5 and 6 at Jiminy Peak and Bousquet Ski Areas in the Berkshires of western Massachusetts.

The Games will feature both slalom and giant slalom racing for the state's top men and women alpine racers in the masters division.

"The masters competition will be greatly expanded this year," said Barbara Long, Winter Games coordinator, "and we expect the number of entrants and caliber of talent to be representative of the great masters skiing that is in this state."

Any skier 21 years of age or over can qualify for the Bay State Games in any one of three ways:

1. Be a member of USSA and submit points
2. Show proof of winning a gold medal in a Nastar race series at Bradford Hill, Mt. Tom or Wachusett.
3. Be one of the top five male or female skiers in the Adult Ski Leagues at either Bousquet, Brodie Mountain or Nashoba Valley as of February 15, 1988.

Masters skiers will compete in four age categories - A, 21 to 30; B, 31 to 42; C, 43 to 54 and D, 35 years and over.

The masters skiing competition will highlight the overall alpine events of the Bay State Winter Games which will also bring together the state's best scholastic (high school) and open (collegiate) skiers in this multi-area competition.

The sports of ski orienteering, cross country skiing and figure skating also make up the 1988 Bay State Winter Games program.

Good show, that Expo

by Bill Conlon

You missed a good show if you didn't get out to Worcester for the 12th Annual Eastern Fishing and Outdoors Expo. The show, which ended on Sunday, drew outdoors types by the tens of thousands to look at (and buy) new equipment and services.

Everybody was there. If you can name a tackle manufacturer, they probably had a booth at the expo. The main floor was lined with booths bearing trusted names like Fenwick, Uncle Josh, Diawa, Humminbird, Zebco -- and the list just kept rolling on.

But a lot of smaller names were also on hand for the show. Guide services and lodges from the Great White North were all over the place, along with the fish and wildlife folks from Rhode Island, New York, Vermont, Maine, New Hampshire and of course the Bay State. About 350 exhibitors were on hand, total.

Tewksbury's own Rusty Kraynick had a booth on the main floor, where he was busily turning out his custom-made spinnerbaits. In an interview a few months back, Rusty said he was making up hundreds of spinnerbaits for the show, and it was easy to see why. He never had a moment's rest.

Pete's Gun and Tackle in Hudson, New Hampshire, also had a busy booth, not far from Rusty's. (Pete's is just over the state line near Tyngsboro, and is well known by local hunting and fishing types.)

The center of the main floor was taken up by a long, narrow tank of water, where demonstrations of fly and bait casting were held by pros such as Lefty Kreh of Baltimore. The casters wore headsets tied into loudspeakers, and they narrated as they went. Pretty informative stuff, especially for someone like me who has multiple scars behind both ears from attempts at fly casting.

The tank was about 60 feet long, but it sure looked like about half a mile. The pros were hitting three-foot circles from the far end of the tank, consistently. Such skill would be real handy for lobbing rubber worms into suitcase-sized holes in the lily pads.

Lefty also narrated a slide show on taking fishing pictures, a task which I've neglected for a bit too long. Hmmm.

Around the Centrum's circular walkway was the boat displays. Some day, when I've got a few thou I don't know what to do with, I'd love to sink it into a new bass boat. Someday -- sigh!

And there were critters at the show, too. One tank (which could have been turned a few degrees for better viewing) held two enormous salmon, both over 20 pounds, and across the aisle was an outdoors diorama featuring live beavers.

(If you can't guess, then go look it up in the dictionary.)

At the far end of the hall were two folks from Aurora, Colorado, holding an adult bald eagle and an adult golden eagle, along with a prairie falcon and a great horned owl. The narrator told me that a great horned owl can indeed make off with a housecat, but that they prefer food that doesn't fight back. If you've ever seen a huge brown bird flying silently through the trees around sunset, it's a great horned. Impressive in the extreme.

Paul Fuller, executive producer of the Expo, refused to release his attendance figures, but they had to be in the thousands. The Centrum was jammed.

Fuller said next year's Expo will be held from February 1 to 5, again at the Centrum. The 1989 show will be the 13th annual, and the fifth year at the Centrum in Worcester. The Expo used to be held in the Boxboro Sheraton, he said, until the show just outgrew the place. The Centrum show is one of three that his group holds every year.

So mark the calendar for next February. It's quite a show!

— Tackle Box —

The Tewksbury Rod & Gun Club will be holding its annual Members Night Out, to benefit the club's Handicapped Children's Christmas Party, on Feb. 27 from 7 p.m. until the witching hour. Tickets are free but a $2.50 donation is asked.

Speaking of TR&G, there will be another free Hunter Safety Course at the Chandler Street clubhouse starting March 3. The club has been drawing some of the biggest Hunter Safety Course classes in the state, and this one could set a new record. Novice hunters ages 14 and up get a Certificate of Competency for successfully running the course, but we long-toothed nimrods could benefit from the class as well. Call George Rost at 851-6286 to find out more about the class.

And speaking of classes, there's a fly-fishing course being offered by ULowell's continuing ed program starting Feb. 29 at 6:30 p.m. For a mere $55 you can learn all there is to know about fly fishing, from line to lunkers. Call 452-5000 ext. 2221 or ext. 2228 for details.

Tournament results --

It was a spendid, if brisk, weekend on the ice for two area derbies. The mercury at dawn dipped below the big Z, but things warmed up to a tropical 18 degrees or so by mid-day. Sadly, the fishing itself was a bit cold, though.

Saturday's Crystal Lakers event attracted a pitiful 43 anglers, which is a sad turnout for any derby. The showing was so bad, in fact, that $4 was deducted from each prize just to cover costs. Some 20 fish were brought in for weighing, and derby organizer Ed Nolet said all went back into the lake alive.

First place and $196 went to Frank Fowler of Westford for a 3-pound-6 pickerel. Trophies went to each of the winners, and all of the top five entries were pickerel.

Second and $96 went to Bob Pinard of Dracut for a 3-pound pickerel; third and $71 was taken by Waltham's Bill Lavoier for a 2-pound-14-ouncer; fourth was a $46 2-pound-4 specimen hauled in by Wilmington's Ed Silva; and last place was a $21 fish weighing 2-2 and taken by Gerry Bouchard of Tyngsboro.

The Greater Lowell Fly Fishers saw a turnout of 172 anglers on Sunday, down from the 320 of the previous week. A side attraction on Sunday was a chance to watch the annual under-the-ice scuba dive by the Lowell Underwater Explorers Club. Having once made the same dive with the LUEC (yeah, I did) I'm here to tell you that Cold! takes on a whole new meaning when the pond ice is overhead! Even the grave itself can't possibly be THAT frigid!

First place in the GLFF event and $300 event went to Harry Bosselman of Hudson, N.H., for a four-pound-4 largemouth, taken five minutes after the derby started. To make things sweeter, Harry's only flag of the day was also worth the $100 prize for the biggest fish caught by a member. Lucky guy!

Second and $150 went to Theo Mylonas of Methuen for a bass that pulled the needle down to 2-15; third was a 2-pound-10 bass caught by Pete Runaldi of Wilmington worth $100; and fourth place and $75 went to former club president Norm Ulibarri for a pickerel of 2-pounds-6. After almost 20 years of club derbies, this was Norm's first "money" fish. Fifth place and $50 was handed to Dunstable's Dave Drew for a 2-6 pickerel that was a bit longer than Norm's. Sixth

Fishing Expo

Thousands of anglers jammed the Worcester Centrum over the weekend for the 12th annual Eastern Fishing & Outdoors Expo. Some 350 booths and exhibitors filled the halls and floors, with attractions ranging from fly casting lessons and new bass boats to live eagles, salmon and beavers. The curtain at the left of center in the photo is the backdrop for the casting pool.

Ice fishing tournaments

Saturday, Feb. 13: New England Bass Angling Association on Knopps Pond, Groton. All NEBAA derbies are based on total catch, with a separate prize for the biggest single fish. A limit of small fish could carry the day!

Sunday, Feb. 14: Merrimack Valley Bass Masters on Long Pond in Tyngsboro; the Green Water Wizards big event on Fort Meadow Reservoir in Marlboro; and a Merrimack Bait & Tackle derby on Lake Attitash in Merrimack, Mass.

This town bought an 18 hole golf course

By PHYLLIS NISSEN

Cross country ski trails galore, snow-making equipment, a fitness facility, golf, swimming — all that and more may be in North Reading's immediate future, thanks to a recent vote by that community to take the Hillview Country Club by eminent domain.

"I have such a good feeling about what happened at town meeting," says Walter Bilowz, chairman of the new Hillview Commission. "Everyone that I talked to felt wonderful that they had accepted the challenge and met it, and that good things would happen because of what they did."

Accept the "challenge" of preserving the last of their open space, they did — by a vote of 611 to nine, a 98.5 percent majority of one of the largest crowds to ever attend a North Reading town meeting. "Hillview is the last open space which presents a vista you can observe from the roads, where you can see great distance onto the property, the ponds, rolling hills, and all the natural beauty and amenities of open space," says Bilowz.

"This investment gives the town such a tremendous opportunity for capital planning as well as preserving open space and recreational opportunities," he says. "This can be an income-producing property after the bonding is paid off and that income can be used to fund many important programs that will come up in the future. All in addition to protecting our aquifer."

A longing to preserve the open space which had drawn them to North Reading in the first place, concern about the aquifer, and an in-depth education about the options available to them led to the remarkable voter turnout, the bold decision to take Hillview's 141.2 acres — and to what many of its citizens are terming the town's proudest moment, its finest hour.

"Open space in many communities involves wooded areas where you can see the first course of trees but can't see the full beauty and depth of the open space and forest, unless you actually go into the woods," says Bilowz. "In North Reading, virtually all of the upland — gently rolling land with fields and trees and depth where you can see 100, 200 yards or so — has been developed."

"Most of us came here to get away from crowded urban communities and to find some open space," he continues. "If we had lost the Hillview open space, we would have been taking a step backward. When the town meeting voted in January to take the property, the voters all were aware of the devastating impact of the loss of this irreplaceable vista, and of the irreplaceable value of the aquifer."

They were aware because the committee did its homework thoroughly, reporting all findings to the town through meetings and media, a procedure which did not take place overnight. Appointed by the selectmen one year ago, the seven-member study committee had history to consider and research to do.

"The committee was formed as a result of things that happened over almost an eight or nine year period," explains Bilowz. "Everybody started hearing about aquifer protection in the '70's although for most people that didn't mean too much. In '78, we lost the Stickney well on Concord St. because of industrial and bacterial contamination. The Stickney well was a major water-producing well for the town so from that time, our attention was dramatically focussed on trying to preserve our aquifer."

Two years ago, North Reading's Community Planning Commission proposed an aquifer district zoning law. "A lot of people such as myself were troubled because the law was extremely restrictive and precluded virtually any development in the aquifer zones," says Bilowz. "It created a problem of balancing municipal interests in protecting the aquifer with the right to use your property as you see fit. If felt the aquifer zoning law was in the nature of a taking of the land because it was so restrictive."

Many people at town meeting felt the same way, and the bylaw was defeated. Meanwhile, the owner of Hillview, realizing that his options would be limited if an aquifer protection zoning law was passed, filed a preliminary subdivision plan of 110 lots for the Hillview property. At that point, the selectmen, considering the potential loss of the open space and the impact of development on the aquifer, formed the Hillview Study Committee to assess alternatives and investigate possible acquisition of the property.

The committee was faced with myriad questions and problems. "The first question was, if we were to consider taking the land, how would we fund the acquisition," says Bilowz. "This was particularly important to North Reading

ROVING

Except for a very brief January thaw a couple of weeks ago, this has been a pretty cold and dismal winter. It also seems that, after numerous nearly snowless winters, we are getting back into a pattern of snowy winters.

Of course, nothing could be as bad as that snowy winter we experienced ten years ago (has it been that long, really?), when we went through the worst winter storm in our lives. Dick Albert, during his recollection of blizzardy winters this past weekend on Channel 5, reminded us of that. It was certainly one time in my life I wouldn't want to repeat. It is fun to look back at, but to go through it again would be like asking somebody to drop you off in Greenland for a month without anything to eat, drink or entertain you. No thanks.

Watching an old video of the Blizzard of '78 brought back a lot of memories, that was for sure. Going through the blizzard was like living through the Kennedy assassination: everybody old enough to remember the event has his own war stories to tell. You can recall exactly where you were the days the storm hit, and for the most part, you can recall what you did to survive the ordeal.

In my case, I was living in an apartment in Central Square, in Woburn, at the time. I was still married then, and my wife, who dreadfully hated cold and snow (she would have gladly moved to Florida at the drop of a hat back then), was not particularly pleased when we discovered we'd lost our heat. We had electric heat, and when the heft of the ice and snow became too much for the power lines, so went our heat. Like thousands of others braving the storm, we had to figure out ways to stay warm until the storm blew over and the power company could restore the electricity.

Our landlord lived nearby, and he offered to take us in for the time being (this is one of those classic cases: people whom you would never have much of an association with suddenly become your best friends during times of adversity). He and his wife had a fireplace, and they offered to let us sit near it to keep warm. At least till the wood ran out. Eventually it did.

In the meantime, my wife opted to join our landlord and his wife. I chose to remain at the apartment. I watched my wife trek across the street to our landlord's house. I don't think I actually got to watch her enter the back of the sprawling gray domain — the snow and wind blurred everything once she was about fifty steps away from our apartment building, which was actually a two-family dwelling. When I was confident that she was safe inside our landlord's house, I decided to entertain myself with a good book. I wrapped four blankets around me, then huddled on one end of the couch in the living room, and proceeded to lose myself between the covers of a John D. MacDonald — Travis McGee mystery novel.

I could read for only so long, then I began to itch to do something else. The problem was, I couldn't get up off the couch. Once I slipped out from beneath those blankets, I nearly froze my you-know-what off. So I had to remain under those blankets for hours. The only thing I could do when I wasn't reading was stare out the front window. God, what a miserable reminder that Mother Nature truly does hold all the trump cards!

I have always been one who liked the cold. Even though I am

Eiji Oue, Youth Symphony director

Youth Symphony appears in Stoneham

The Benefit Concert of the Greater Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra will be presented Sunday evening, February 21 at 7:30 p.m. in the First Congregational Church, Stoneham. The performance will include Stravinsky's "Pulcinella" and Schubert's 7th Symphony. Admission is $4 each, is tax-deductible, and all proceeds will be used to reduce the total cost per participant in the orchestra's tour to Japan.

There are several young musicians from local communities who, by audition, have been selected to perform with one or another of the GBSYO Orchestras. They include Eric Dewar and Ellen McAllister of Woburn, Michael Fieleke, Phoebe Goodwin and David McIndoe of Winchester, Stephen Chaggaris of Lynnfield, Jeff Murphy of Wilmington, and Clark Mansur of Stoneham. They each have their own story to tell.

GBSYO is an independent, non-profit organization in residence at Boston University School of the Arts. It has been in existence for 30 years and consists of three orchestras. There are 200 participants selected on the basis of audition, and they represent 78 New England communities. The Chamber Orchestra which is coming to Stoneham is composed of 40 of the most talented of those young musicians. There are in the group young virtuosos, many competition winners and even a few who have performed as soloists with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Music Director, Eiji Oue, is in his seventh year with the orchestras and is also Associate Conductor of the Buffalo Philharmonic and Music Director of the Empire State Youth Orchestra. At the invitation of Seiji Ozawa, Oue has participated in the Tanglewood Festival conducting program where he studied under Leonard Bernstein, has shared the podium with Bernstein and Claudio Abbado, and has been conductor of the Tanglewood Youth Orchestra.

Eiji's musicians, amid strenuous academic requirements, daily practice, regular rehearsals and a full concert schedule, are responsible for raising the complete cost of the tour to Japan. This will be a different orchestra and a totally different program from the one to be presented by the GBSYO Senior Orchestra for Greater Stoneham Community Concerts in May. Only the most outstanding members of the Senior Orchestra are invited by Eiji to participate in the Chamber Orchestra. They are members of what has been called by some adjudicators "the finest youth orchestra in this country."

To obtain tickets to the Benefit Concert, you may call Richard R. Mansur, Chairman of the GBSYO Benefit Concert, at 438-0294.

NEMH healthy heart month

February is Healthy Heart Month at New England Memorial Hospital (NEMH) in Stoneham. During February, NEMH will offer a 20 percent discount on the Healthy Heart Lipid Profile test. The test provides a detailed analysis of an individual's cholesterol level. Follow-up sessions are scheduled to review the results and offer suggestions on decreasing the risk of heart disease.

Participants must fast for 12 hours, then take the lipid profile blood test, which reveals the level of total cholesterol, HDL ("good" cholesterol), LDL ("bad" cholesterol), triglycerides and glucose. The lipid profile costs $28, which is a 20 percent discount from the usual cost of $35.

Those tested can attend one of two results sessions to discuss the outcome of their tests and find out how to lower cholesterol levels, if necessary. The sessions are scheduled for Tuesday, February 16, from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m., and Sunday, February 21, from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., in the NEMH auditorium. The follow-up meetings will be led by Jerry Kaufman, director of health promotion, and Julie Marcell, a registered dietitian.

To purchase a lipid profile voucher and register for a follow-up session, please call the NEMH Center for Health Promotion at 665-1740, extension 426.

ROVING From S-1

a summer sports person, I much prefer to have the temperature low, say, around sixty degrees. I even like to keep my house at that temperature during the winter. It's just more comfortable for me, that's all. My friends like to kid me about wanting to save money on my heating bill, and once in a while one of them will ride me about my wife finally packing her bags and moving south because she couldn't stand the heat being so low in the house all the time.

I have to admit that even I got to the point where I couldn't stand the cold during the Blizzard of '78. By the end of the storm, when the snow had ceased and the winds had begun to diminish and the crews began their chores of cleaning up the snow and turning back on the power and phone lines, even I was ready to join my wife and our landlord. The rock who'd always been able to tolerate just about any weather condition had begun to crack. Luckily I was able to save face; the storm of the century was over and our electricity was back on, and so was the heat. By the time my wife arrived back home I was able to respond to her query with a statement like, "Ah, it was a piece of cake." Sure it was, Dan.

The fun started when people began to emerge from their homes to explore the world with six-foot snow banks, which were created in less-than-artistic form by the hundreds of snow plows that were put into action to remove the snow from our streets. I'll never forget the first time I drove after the storm. I was overwhelmed with a strange feeling, a feeling I probably would have felt exploring a new planet for the first time. There were miles and miles of giant white walls on either side of me as I crept slowly to my destination, and from behind those massive white cliffs came signs of life: humans digging out their buried automobiles, children digging huge igloos in which to play and savor their break from school, and city workers digging out fire hydrants.

At one point, I remember seeing a hand and then an entire arm suddenly emerge from one of those hardened precipices. I slowed to almost a stop and waited to see who — or what — would come crashing out. Suddenly a young boy, no more than twelve, appeared out of the wall of snow. He held a shovel, and was covered with so much snow, he looked like a tiny version of the abominable snowman. The monumental task at hand didn't seem to lessen the spirits of this young fellow. Once he was on the other side of the wall — he'd obviously started digging his way from the sidewalk in front of his house — he began to tackle the rest of his shoveling chore with tremendous zeal. Recovering from this storm — at least in the physical sense — was definitely for the young.

Things haven't changed much in the past ten years: I still don't mind the cold, and I still keep my house at around sixty degrees. This really ticks off my friends and family, who tend to avoid visiting me during the winter months. Most prefer to come by after the first of April. I keep telling them it's healthier to live in a cool environment rather than a hot one, especially if you travel in and out of doors as much as I do. They keep telling me it's because I don't like expensive heating bills (which I don't, by the way, and furthermore, I don't know anybody who does). And I still get those friends who like to remind me that my ex-wife is probably living the life of Riley — somewhere in the Florida Keys. I guess I just have a bunch of weak-blooded friends and relatives.

If they are really having a hard time keeping warm this winter, I have a list of terrific suggestions for them. I'd like to share those suggestions with all of you.

First of all, there is sitting in front of the fireplace. This, I have discovered since acquiring a house with a fireplace of my own, is a wonderful way to warm the cockles of your heart, especially if you, like me, enjoy sharing the cockle-warming experience with a member of the opposite sex. If I am alone, of course, I have to actually crack my sliding door a tad, since the heat from the fireplace gets to be too much. There is a negative side to using a fireplace, naturally. You have to constantly be stocking wood, and it takes time to light the fire. And then you have to wait till the fire is out before you can leave the house. For a busy guy like me, this can be a royal nuisance. I must admit, however, that I wish I had a fireplace during the Blizzard of '78, with the royal nuisances and all.

For those who can't afford the luxury of a fireplace, there is always the oven (providing you have one; these days many places have just microwave ovens, and I don't suggest warming yourself inside a microwave oven). You simply open the oven door, turn on the stove, and sit in front of it once it has heated up. I frequently enjoy sitting in front of the refrigerator during the summer, with a pad of paper and a pencil in my hand and donning merely a pair of shorts. I'll have to try doing the same in front of the stove as a means of sparking creativity.

For those with only microwave ovens, there is always your closet. Not to sit in, but to find lots of clothes, which you can wear in layers as a means of keeping your body warm. This is particularly annoying to me, though, because you lose most of your mobility, and it's a pain in the neck to go to the bathroom.

I'd much prefer slipping under the electric blanket as a means of getting warm, if getting warm were something I had to worry about. There are pros and cons to this method also. For example, on the pro side: you get to share the experience with somebody you love, if you can convince her to drop what she is doing and hop in the sack at any given moment that you feel a chill in the air. On the con side: you have to constantly get out of bed to change the tv station (unless, of course, you have a remote, but if you could afford a tv with one of those, you could afford an electric space heater), go to the bathroom, go to the refrigerator, or answer the phone.

If things get really tough, you can always go outside and climb into your car and turn on the heater. Now this method of getting warm is particularly dangerous, especially if your car is in a garage, so I don't suggest you try this idea unless your car is parked outdoors. After all, you have to run the motor to run the heater and that can also be costly. It would be cheaper to turn up the thermostat.

There is a method of keeping warm which I subscribe to as frequently as possible. That is cuddling with your spouse or girlfriend/boyfriend as soon as you feel the temperature drop below sixty-eight degrees. What my friends haven't figured out yet is that this is the reason I keep my heat down. I happen to require a great deal of affection to remain alive.

Now if none of these suggestions help you to find a way to warm up, here is another idea: go visit one of your friends who enjoys keeping his thermostat on eighty degrees all the time. He's probably homesick most of the time, so he'd probably enjoy the company.

And when all of these suggestions fail, there is one sure way to warm your body; head south for the winter. Now there's an idea I could live with. Perhaps I could save a few bucks by visiting somebody in Florida, say the Florida Keys.

Hey, anybody know where my ex-wife is living at the moment?

Layer that clothing

In the winter, a warm, dry child is a happy child. The MSPCC advises that you take care to ensure that your child is bundled up — hats, mittens, warm coats and boots are needed on these cold winter days. Layers of clothes are warmer and more comfortable.

Some tips for keeping children healthy and happy during the winter season:

—If a child's cold or cough persists, seek the advice of the family physician.

—Before ice skating on ponds, call your local fire department to be sure the ice is solid enough for skating.

—Make winter playtime a family funtime. Plan outdoor activities that involve the whole family.

—Always use seatbelts for each child in the car.

—Don't leave children unattended in the car while shopping.

—Children's fingers and toes easily become frostbitten without their awareness. Warm and dry hands and feet are a must.

—Do not allow children to ski, skate or sled without supervision.

The MSPCC cares about the well-being of our children. Founded in 1878, the MSPCC is the only statewide private protective child welfare agency in the country.

MOVIE REVIEWS Rochelle Flynn

Julia and Julia Five Corners She's Having a Baby

Julia and Julia Starring Kathleen Turner, Gabriel Byrne, Sting. Directed by Peter Del Monte. Produced by Francesco Pinto, Gaetano Stucchi. Screenplay by Silvia Napolitano, Sandro Petraglia and Del Monte. Rated R (profanity, violence and nudity).

All you really need to know about Julia and Julia is that it's the cinematic equivalent of watching paint dry. Esoteric and arty, this Italian production is big on close-ups of legs crossing a room, but falls short when it comes to common sense. From a technical aspect it's a very interesting film, but it's a real snoozer if you're just looking for some diversion.

Kathleen Turner plays an American abroad who's existing in parallel universes, one in which she's a lonely widow and another in which she shares a happy home with her still living husband and a son. Sting, who really is growing as an actor, exists in both her worlds, and seems to be the only one doubly affected by Turner's actions. The rest of the people exist independently of the other world that may or may not be a manifestation arisen from Turner's solitude. Adding to the confusion is a Twilight Zonish ending that further confuses an already unexplainable movie.

Film students and people interested in the technical angle of film should probably suffer through this, as it was shot in high definition video and transferred to film, which is a process never tried before for a feature-length film. There are visible problems, as some blurriness occurs and certain scenes lack both color intensity and depth. But once the kinks have been worked out, this process may change the way movies are made in the future. It is much, much cheaper to shoot in video than film, which could mean a new financial life for independent filmmakers. Of course, if the movie puts the audience to sleep, no one is going to care very much.

Five Corners Starring Jody Foster, Tim Robbins, Todd Graff, John Turturro. Directed by Tony Bill. Produced by Forrest Murray and Bill. Screenplay by John Patrick Shanley. Rated R (profanity and violence).

Written by the same man who penned Moonstruck, Five Corners is a wild, 36-hour trip back to the Bronx of 1964. John Patrick Shanley has created an off-center world in which an algebra teacher is murdered with a swift arrow in the back, working class lovers court while riding on top of elevators, and a would-be rapist brings penguins to the object of his obsession.

Shanley's earthy, realistic dialogue makes for a fabulous character study. From his glue-sniffing, gum-snapping teenagers to the quiet prettiness of victimized Jody Foster, you fall for these people. For the most part they are funny and strange within the confines of reality. You don't doubt for one minute the sincerity of Tim Robbins when he gets involved in that "student not violent negro thing" or the lack of feeling in the voice of a teenager who asks for a date with the line, "Listen, someone murdered our teacher, so we have the day off."

Unfortunately, for all the marvelous dialogue there are some real plot problems. Foster, as the daughter of a pet shop owner, was once assaulted by a neighborhood boy, played with eerie intensity by John Turturro. When she hears he's being released from prison, where he served time for the attempted rape, Foster decides to dump her slightly built boyfriend and seek help from Robbins, the ox-like young man who saved her once before. The problem is that Robbins is "out to lunch with this Gandhi thing" and has tuned into a nonviolent lifestyle.

While the movie starts out with serious undertones, it is essentially a comedy. But the transition from funny to tragic just isn't smooth. There is a pivotal plot flaw where Foster agrees to meet her would-be assailant at an isolated location at midnight, and there is absolutely no good reason for her to be there. Why would someone who is trying to protect herself, someone who seems reasonably strong and sane, agree to a rendezvous with a rapist?

It is during this scene that the movie slides from humorous to suspenseful, and while it is a bit jarring, it is still entertaining. Even though the plot devices are weak, Five Corners is so memorable and Shanley's creations are such fun that I almost want to apologize for finding fault with it. Considering his success with Moonstruck, one can only assume Shanley will work out his writing problems in the future, as this flick shows nothing but promise.

She's Having a Baby Starring Kevin Bacon, Elizabeth McGovern. Written, directed and produced by John Hughes. Rated PG-13 (profanity, brief nudity).

A prediction. John Hughes, writer, director and producer, is going to awaken the morning after the premiere of She's Having a Baby to the sound of toilets flushing across America.

With Some Kind of Wonderful, Hughes claimed he was finished making movies starring, and presumably for, teenagers. His Planes, Trains and Automobiles really did make it as a crossover flick, but his current send-up of suburban lifestyles proves, once again, that Hughes spreads himself too thin. The man cranks out a lot of material at the expense of quality, resulting in a film that no one, at least no one still breathing, is going to find anything but flat and mawkish.

Vitriolic? Perhaps. But this isn't a typical Hughes movie that will amuse you slightly before it quickly evaporates from memory, like Pretty in Pink. It's cloying, dull and at times bordering on the offensive. There are only four funny scenes, five if you count the cameos during the final credits. What appears in between is a primo example of how you can't shoot a movie if the script isn't there. And honestly, it isn't there.

Kevin Bacon and Elizabeth McGovern play a youthful couple skipping down the yellow brick road of matrimonial bliss. Well, at least she does. He keeps falling into the potholes. Bacon's character spends most of the movie shining and fantasizing over a marriage and lifestyle he finds strangling.

McGovern's character often comes across as unsympathetic simply because she's so sketchy. She wants suburbia and all its trappings, so we see her at the altar looking just shy of smug. The few scenes that develop McGovern's character reveal a harpy who tosses out her birth control pills and doesn't bother to tell hubby. It doesn't take long for you to wonder why he loves her, as most people wouldn't even like her.

By the time she's with child, it's 90 minutes into the movie and you realize how misleading the title is. Aside from box office grosses, the film is actually about growing up and shouldering responsibility. Actually, it could be a visual manual on the subject, complete with a sing-song, slo-mo ending that brings the point home with a vengeance.

We've already blamed the script, but a great deal of the problem is that Hughes is a lazy filmmaker. He relies heavily on narrative to tell a story he should be showing. There are also enough flat head-shots and close-ups to preclude any editing before this is released on airlines and in video stores.

One can assume that we are going to see even more baby movies in this growing genre, now that Y-people are reproducing. Fine, no one hates kids, some of us even like them. But motherhood and gurgling babies are not reliable enough institutions to carry a movie. You have to have a script, too, or all those MTV cutaway scenes look as clumsy as they really are.

Short Takes

The Grand Highway is a warm-hearted French film about a boy sent to live in the country with a mean-spirited couple while his mother waits out the last few weeks of her pregnancy. While he struggles with change and tries to adapt, the couple learns a little about compassion, so that by the final frame everyone has grown just enough to be believable. Playing at the Coolidge Corner Moviehouse.  1/2

The Serpent and the Rainbow is being touted as a Wes Craven horror yarn when in actuality it is about the Haitian voodoo religion and the "zombie" powder that causes people to go into a trance-like state very like death. While it's an okay, if somewhat disjointed telling of one man's search for the truth behind the myth, it certainly isn't the scariest of the ads would have you believe. Rated R. **

Gaby-A True Story is the factual account of writer Rachel Brimmer, a woman born with cerebral palsy that left her only with the use of her left foot. It may sound mawkish, but this is really a lovely, lighthearted story of a spirited young woman who also happens to be crippled. Brimmer thought of herself as a person first and then considered her handicap, although she had to overcome the prejudices of those around her, especially school boards unwilling to adapt to both her bright mind and her immobility. The problem with the picture is that while it is a tender portrayal, it is also a bit slow moving as there isn't really much storyline. One wonders why Brimmer's story wasn't made into a documentary, which would have precluded the need for dramatic elements. Rated R. ***

The Lonely Passion of Judith Hearne develops ambience, creates characters and provides a vehicle for the fine talents of Maggie Smith and Bob Hoskins. What it lacks is a firm commitment to plot, because the story finally just lets go, as if everyone stopped trying. Smith is fabulous as the creaky, withering spinster who has passed middle age and is facing her declining years with only a bottle to keep her company. Hoskins is the Americanized Dublineer returned to the homeland seeking fame and fortune. He's a hustler who thinks he's found a mark. The guy's not all that bad, but bad enough so that Judith learns that being alone doesn't necessarily mean you're a nobody. Rated R. ***

Braddock, Missing in Action III is the best of the Chuck Norris kill-the-commies flicks — but keep in mind that later model Pintos weren't good cars just because they were better than the early ones. This time Norris goes back to 'Nam to rescue a wife he thought had died during the fall of Saigon. Along the way he saves an orphanage full of Amerasian children, most of whom are too young to have been around before the Americans pulled out. Go figure. Rated R. *

Moonstruck is everything a comedy should be and then some. It's upbeat, intelligent and pure unadulterated escapism that's reminiscent of the old Ernst Lubitsch movies. The comedy is sophisticated and the entanglements complex as an Italian-American family plays out a game of love, jealousy and marriage. And yes, Cher can do comedy. Rated PG. ***

Try sitting by fluorescent lights to solve winter blahs!

By MERCER CROSS
National Geographic
News Service

Dr. Norman E. Rosenthal, one of the world's leading authorities on seasonal depression, admits that he himself suffers from the winter blahs.

He copes with his problem the same way his more severely afflicted patients at the National Institute of Mental Health do. For several hours each winter day, he works beside a bank of especially bright fluorescent lights.

An unknown number of Americans — at least several hundred thousand — become depressed enough to cease functioning normally during the dark days of winter. Psychiatrist Rosenthal coined the term now commonly used to describe their trouble seasonal affective disorder, SAD for short.

Starting in the fall and continuing through the winter, SAD sufferers sink into depression. They lose their ability to concentrate. They overeat, oversleep, and gain weight. They become irritable and squabble with their spouses and associates. Their sex drive diminishes.

Women are four times likelier than men to have the seasonal melancholia. Onset of the disorder may come in childhood, but is more likely to start in young adulthood. Although darkness seems to be the main cause, cold, snowy weather may contribute.

Alcoholism and suicide go hand in hand with SAD. "Lots of that suicide — probably 90 percent — is alcohol-related," says Dr. Aron S. Wolf, a psychiatrist in Anchorage, Alaska.

Come spring, as the days grow longer, the symptoms start to fade. By summer, the SAD victims are normal again.

The farther north people live, the more prevalent the syndrome becomes. Swedes call it "Lapp sickness," for the isolated Laplanders who dwell above the Arctic Circle. The Finnish word is "kaamos."

Whatever it's called, seasonal depression has been around as long as recorded history. In about 400 B.C., Socrates said that "melancholia occurs in the spring."

But not until the winter of 1981-82 did Rosenthal and his colleagues conduct research that led to development of the full-spectrum light panels, five to 10 times brighter than average indoor lights.

Among American specialists, the lights are the generally accepted treatment for SAD sufferers. After a few days of sitting in front of the lights for several hours, most victims of extreme blahs perk up significantly. When they cease treatment for more than a few days, their depression returns.

The specialists don't agree on the optimal daily time for using the lights. Rosenthal says two hours; other doctors say one; still others say six. A minority of patients don't respond to the lights and require other treatment, such as antidepressants.

Doctors have yet to learn exactly what brings on SAD. One physiological possibility is that it is related to hormones such as melatonin and prolactin and to serotonin, a chemical in the body. Bright lights, according to one theory, help to control these substances.

"The one thing I like to emphasize is that if somebody is genuinely depressed, he or she would do very well to have an expert treat the problem," Rosenthal says.

That advice doesn't stop some depressed people from circumventing their doctors. "We send lots of people to the lighting-supply store," Wolf says of those who reject professional help.

Although light therapy so far has been used predominantly by U.S. doctors, international cooperation may not be far away. Dr. Carla Hellekson, a psychiatrist in Fairbanks, Alaska, says that Americans and Russians have reached preliminary agreement on a joint study by Alaskan and Siberian specialists.

Among the many unanswered questions, Dr. Hellekson says, is why Alaskan Eskimos are less susceptible than whites to SAD. "Clearly they've adapted over many centuries," Wolf says. "If you believe in the land-bridge theory, the Eskimo people were Siberians to begin with."

Long Scandinavian winters crate their share of depression. But Dr. Eric Jannerfeldt, medical attache at the Swedish Embassy in Washington, says that light treatment isn't used in his country.

"Swedes tend to take advantage of winter much more than you do here," he says. Part of the U.S. problem, he suggests, may be the prevalence of windowless offices. "That is quite unthinkable in Sweden," he says.

Some scientists have drawn a correlation between SAD symptoms and hibernating animals. Rosenthal rejects the correlation. "Zoologists scoff at the analogy because it's very superficial," he says. "The similarity is that both the hibernating animal and a patient with SAD are less active in the winter. And that's probably where it stops."

All the experts agree that much remains to be learned about the perplexing illness. Rosenthal and his associates at the national institute are doing research on reverse SAD, which depresses some people in summer but send them soaring in winter.

Doctors at the University of Minnesota Hospitals in Minneapolis are investigating SAD's effects on children. At Brookside Hospital in Nashua, N.H., researchers concerned about possible retinal damage from the full-spectrum lights are studying the removal of ultraviolet light from the spectrum.

Rosenthal says he hopes that eventually light therapy will go beyond its present limited use and "serve as a probe into our understanding of brain function."

LEGEND OF TRISTAN & ISEULT

The most famous and beautiful love story of the Middle Ages is recreated for modern-day audiences. This new and original production, entitled "Tristan and Iseult: A Medieval Romance in Poetry and Music" will be based on authentic medieval texts, freshly translated and revised.

Songs by the greatest poet-musicians of the twelfth and thirteenth century France and Provence will comment and illustrate the narrative of King Mark of Cornwall, his valiant knight Tristan, and the woman they both love, and the blonde Iseult.

The production is semi-staged, with costumes, lights and movement. Performances will take place on Saturday, February 20 at 8 p.m. at Jordan Hall at NE Conservatory, Boston and on Sunday, February 21 at 3 p.m. at Sanders Theatre, Cambridge.

Ticket prices are $15, $12 and $9 and can be purchased at the Jordan Hall Box Office (536-2412) for Jordan Hall concert only; for both performances at Bostix in Quincy Market, all Ticketron outlets, Out-of-Town tickets at Harvard Square; or by mailing an order with a self-addressed stamped envelope to The Boston Camerata, 729 Boylston St., Boston, Ma. 02116. Telephone orders can be made through Concertcharge at 497-1118 with all credit cards. Rush seats based on availability for $6 will be given to students under 25 with ID and to Senior Citizens at the door.

JEAN REDPATH AND THE BOYS OF THE LOUGH

Scottish performer Jean Redpath and the acclaimed Boys of the Lough join forces to present a program of the traditional music of Ireland, Scotland and Northumberland on Friday, February 19 at 8 p.m. in Jordan Hall at the New England Conservatory. The concert is presented as part of the 1987-88 Wang Celebrity Series, Walter Pierce, Managing Director.

Born and raised in Scotland, Jean Redpath is recognized as the leading performer, scholar and teacher of Scottish music. She studied with folklorist Hamish Henderson at Edinburgh University, and with his encouragement, embarked on a performance career. Many of the songs and ballads on her 20 record albums were recovered through her own research and reconstruction. Now living in Leven, Scotland, Jean Redpath has held faculty posts at Wesleyan University, and appeared regularly with Garrison Keillor on A Prairie Home Companion. She is currently recording all 323 songs of Robert Burns.

The Boys of the Lough are five virtuoso instrumentalists from Scotland who perform traditional Celtic music. Mixing guitar and piano with traditional instruments such as the wood flute, uilleann pipes, tin whistle, fiddle, mandolin, and banjo, the Boys of the Lough offer original songs, as well as traditional jigs, hornpipes, and reels that date to 1690.

The program for the concert on Friday, February 19 will be announced from the stage and will include (but will not be limited to) selections from the following: Robert Burns, My Love is Like a Red, Red Rose; Lady John Scott, Annie Laurie; Traditional, Will Ye No Come Back Again, Once I Loved, The Hills of Donegal, Farewell and Remember Me, Lovely Ann, The Waterford Waltz, Lochaber No More.

Remaining tickets for Jean Redpath and the Boys of the Lough are priced at $16.50 and are on sale at Jordan Hall box office (536-2412) or by calling Concertcharge at 497-1118.

Free brochure for walking tours in Great Britain

The Wayfarers, an English walking tour company specializing in the back roads of Britain, has released its schedule for 1988. A new Scottish Borders walk, inspired by the writings and wanderings of Sir Walter Scott, joins a half-dozen popular itineraries in the Cotswolds, Devon, Wales, Yorkshire, Dorset and the Lake District. The Wayfaring season runs from May through October.

Experts in Britain off the beaten path, Wayfarers employs a network of centuries old rights-of-way and country lanes to introduce walkers to the Dorset of Thomas Hardy, James Herriot's Yorkshire, the border castles of Wales and other historic corners of Britain. At every turn, ancient architecture, sleepy hamlets and glorious scenery await discovery.

The five-day, six-night adventures are comfortably paced at about 10 miles a day, educational (but without lectures) and average a companionable dozen people. Topping off invigorating days are nights cloaked in British hospitality, at ivy-clad inns, thatched cottages and cozy hotels. Meals are hearty English breakfasts, pub lunches and home-cooked dinners. To lighten the load, each walk has a manager who transports all luggage and rescues weary walkers from the footpaths.

For more information on Wayfarers and a copy of the 1988 brochure, contact Judy Alpess or Ann Nickerson, The Wayfarers, 166 Thames St., Newport, R.I. 02840, telephone (401) 849-5087. Or the Wayfarers, Braithwaite, Keswick, Cumbria CA125TN; 059682570.

In the Greater Middlesex East area, the focus is on new business developments and ventures. Press releases and notices from brand-new businesses or of established businesses becoming involved in a new field are welcome. Please send to William Pacino, care of this local newspaper.

PACKAGES PLUS

Packages Plus, Inc. opened recently at 175J New Boston Street in Woburn to meet residential and commercial needs for complete packaging, wrapping and shipping services.

In addition, Packages Plus will provide packing supplies, private mailboxes, as well as copier, FAX, notary public and pick-up services. The mailboxes fulfill a need not met by the Woburn Post Office because of the current three to four-month waiting list.

"We can serve as a company's shipping department," said owner Barry Kray, "and do it conveniently and professionally with greater cost-efficiency by lowering a small firm's overhead costs."

According to Kray, Packages Plus can package and ship any item anywhere. To accommodate antiques, odd-size, large or fragile items, Kray will provide on-site estimates and pick up service. He will then wrap and package the item to be sent using UPS, common and various overnight and next-day carriers.

"We can offer customers a substantial savings by shipping any item without a minimum weight requirement, whereas most movers charge for a minimum of 1000 pounds," said Kray.

Kray, who holds a bachelor's degree in business from University of Massachusetts at Amherst, decided to go into the packaging and shipping business because he found there was a need, especially for packing supplies and service, based on his previous position and personal needs. For the past three years, he had served as district sales manager, covering 14 states, for Construction Fasteners, Inc., the manufacturer of Dekfast insulation and fastening systems for the construction industry.

Packages Plus will provide a personal service in guiding each customer to selecting the most cost and time-efficient manner for shipping.

"We will provide professional packings, so that each item will be well protected and handled with care," said Kray, "whether it be furniture, appliance, antiques, glassware, electronic components or precision instruments. If it's shippable, I can package it."

Packages Plus will be open Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. They are a member of the Association of Commercial Mail Receiving Agencies, Inc. For more information, pick-up, estimates or a brochure, call 936-1059.

From S-1

This town bought an 18 hole golf course

because we are badly in need of school renovations and library renovations or construction. The costs of both of these projects estimated at that time were somewhere in the area of $10 million.

"So the first thing we had to do was ascertain what the operation of the golf course and restaurant could generate as income to pay for the bonding," he continues. "The second thing was to find out if any state grant funds were available for this project. Funds were available but we had to have an open space plan approved by the state to qualify."

North Reading had no such plan. "One had been started, though, so we concentrated on working with the town officials involved to complete that plan," says Bilowz. "The five selectmen took over the initiative in this regard, sought the cooperation of town government and had the plan completed, filed and accepted."

In the meantime, to keep all options open, they filed an application for state aid. "We made a study of approximately 15 golf courses to project the likely income of the Hillview golf course and our projections showed we were able to fund a substantial bonding," he says. "We have a strong proposal to the state relative to state aid. The Hillview property is not only open space and a vital aquifer which feeds the Central St. well but its recreational uses and restaurant give us the opportunity to pay at least part of the cost of acquisition."

According to Bilowz, although several other communities have applied for state aid to acquire golf courses, North Reading is the only community seeking aid not only to preserve open space but to protect the aquifer of a major municipal well.

Since the dramatic vote to take over Hillview, all seven of the original study committee members, including Bilowz, have been appointed to the Hillview Commission.

Bilowz was a selectman for three years in the late '60's, town attorney for about four years in the early '70's, and is very active locally, practicing law and appearing before various boards, engaging in litigation that involves the municipality. The other commission members are: former CPC member Fran Hachey, Bill O'Brien, Chief of Police Henry Purcell, former CPC member Jim Senior, George Stack, and CPC member Michael Walsh.

Their mission now is "to do all of the necessary work to implement the town meeting votes so the property can be taken and the necessary permits for operation obtained; to prepare specifications for managerial contracts for the operation of the golf course and lease of the restaurant facilities; and to explore the possibilities of additional recreational uses to enhance the income production to pay down the bonds."

Bilowz makes it clear that the support throughout the study from the citizens of North Reading guaranteed last month's success and insures a smooth transition of the property. "North Reading is a beautiful community," he says. "It is growing rapidly. It's alive and alert. The town officials are dedicated, open-minded and intelligent. There is no way that the Hillview investment could have been made without their support, encouragement and advice, particularly from the selectmen and Finance Committee."

"Everyone on the study committee itself was attentive to meeting attendance, giving input and working together as a team," says Bilowz. "I would like to single out two particular members of the committee: Bill O'Brien, our numbers man, who spent countless hours analyzing the income projections and without those whose hard work it would have been impossible for us to have had a comprehensible financial presentation; and Atty. Jim Senior, who made several presentations, prepared our committee report and did a superb job in both respects."

"Tom Dickinson and Dave Patton from the FinCom gave outstanding assistance and input on the financial aspects of the potential acquisition," he continues. Then there are the "very supportive" Conservation and Recreation Commissions, and the additional multitudes whom Bilowz would like to thank.

"Al Sylvia and Bob Turosz at the 'Transcript,' in their analyses and reporting of various aspects of the committee's operation, were at all times factual, concise and clear," he says. "The committee is thankful that it had such excellent and informative coverage so that the voters who attended town meeting had a good understanding of the issues involved before the presentation and debated commenced."

"I don't mean to say that the reporting by the paper was all rosy," he adds. "The risks of the venture were presented in an appropriate light and the importance of the project was presented accurately. We had informed voters because of the articles, and the editorials."

Thanks also go to Bart Bartlett, the selectman liaison who worked very closely with the committee and to the state officials who became involved. "Representative Beckwith and Senator Buell followed our work from its inception and assisted us in our dealings with the state. As a matter of fact, at town meeting, both were present and made suggestions. They have done an outstanding job of supporting the operations of the committee and helping the town."

"I think it is important to single out these officials not just because they were there but because of the quality and enthusiasm of their assistance," he continues. "I have worked on a lot of committees in the past and I, frankly, have never seen the degree of cooperation and desire to help and succeed that I have seen or this. It was a quantum leap forward in the kind of support usually given to a project like this. That's heartfelt, and an observation with which any member of the committee would agree."

"Everybody wanted this to have a real good shot so they gave it their best shot," he says. "They acted not only for themselves but for future generations."

Keep children safe and warm

In the winter, a warm, dry child is a happy child. The MSPCC advises that you take care to ensure that your child is bundled up — hats, mittens, warm coats and boots are needed on these cold winter days. Layers of clothes are warmer and more comfortable.

Some tips for keeping children healthy and happy during the winter season:

—If a child's cold or cough persists, seek the advice of the family physician.

—Before ice skating on ponds, call your local fire department to be sure the ice is solid enough for skating.

—Make winter playtime a family funtime. Plan outdoor activities that involve the whole family.

—Always use seatbelts for each child in the car.

—Don't leave children unattended in the car while shopping.

—Children's fingers and toes easily become frostbitten without their awareness. Warm and dry hands and feet are a must.

—Do not allow children to ski, skate or sled without supervision.

The MSPCC cares about the well-being of our children. Founded in 1878, the MSPCC is the only statewide private protective child welfare agency in the country.

Quannapowitt presents "Brighton Beach Memoirs"

NEIL SIMON'S - BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS - will open at Quannapowitt Theatre, 55 Hopkins St., Reading, on February 12 and continue on February 13, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28, March 4 and 5. Pictured above director Armand Fillian of Lawrence explains to his production staff (from the left) Nancy Curran and Donna Corbett of Wakefield and Eleanor Guilette of Stoneham, the intricacies of this comedy-drama. For ticket information call the Q.P. hot line at 245-4884.

The third play of the season at the Quannapowitt Playhouse will be Neil Simon's award-winning comedy/drama "Brighton Beach Memoirs."

This warm and amusing play is the first in a trilogy of semi-autobiographical plays about the Jerome family and a young man's coming of age in Brooklyn in 1937.

"Brighton Beach Memoirs" is being directed by Armand Fillian of Lawrence. For the past eight years Armand has been living just a mile from Brighton Beach in Brooklyn, the very setting of the play. He returns to QP, after a 12 year hiatus, where he was made a life member for founding the QP Children's Theatre Company in 1974 which ran several years. (Many of his original students are now pursuing degrees and careers in theatre related fields).

Armand has been involved in many facets of theatre, both on and off the stage. He played Michael in "Boys in the Band" and appeared in "The Diary of Anne Frank" and Anouilh's "Antigone" among many. At QP Armand has directed "Mice and Men," "The Night of the Iguana," "A Delicate Balance," "Gallows Humor," "Arsenic and Old Lace," and "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man in the Mood Marigolds" at the Garret Theatre.

Appearing in this production under Mr. Fillian's able direction is a fine cast of both new and experienced actors from the area. Ryan Condon of Reading is making his debut in the challenging role of Eugene (Simon's counterpart).

Engene's mother, Kate, is being played by QP veteran actress Diane Lind of Reading; you may remember Diane from her powerful portrayals of the mother in "All My Sons" and Queen Eleanor in "Lion In Winter." His father, Jack, is played by Barney Hoop of Wakefield, who appeared in "Twelfth Night" last season.

Brother Stan will be played by another young newcomer to QP, A.J. Sullivan; however, A.J. is well known to the theatre groups in his hometown of Andover, having appeared in "Tartuffe" and "Music Man" to name only two. Living with the Jeromes are Kate's sister Blanch, played by Grace Butler of Lexington, who again is new to QP but long active in theatre including two appearances at NETC in "And Miss Reardon Drinks A Little" and "California Suite"; daughter Laurie, played by Kathy Moran of Wakefield who appeared as young Ivy in "Skin of Our Teeth" earlier this season; and daughter Nora who will be played by Lori Wagner of Reading. Lori too has been active in her high school drama club but will be making her debut on the community stage as Eugene's "older" cousin and the object of his pubescent curiosity.

The technical crew for "Brighton Beach Memoirs" is comprised of people who have been involved in many previous QP productions. The producer is Donna Corbett of Wakefield. Stage Manager is Nancy Curran also of Wakefield. Lighting design is credited to C.H. Andrews, while Set Design is by Jay Stone of Salem, N.H. Eleanor Guilette of Stoneham is in charge of costumes.

"Brighton Beach Memoirs" will be presented at the Quannapowitt playhouse on Hopkins Street in Reading. Senior Citizens' Night will be on February 11. The play officially opens on February 12 and plays again on Feb. 3, 19, 20, 26, 27, 28 with the final performances on March 4 and 5.

For tickets and further information call 245-4884 or 944-4949. You won't want to miss this one!

Citizen Info Service

On Friday, January 15, Secretary of State Michael J. Connolly answered the one millionth telephone call to come into the Citizen Information Service. The call was placed by Albert Barbaro, a Malden resident, who was looking for information on pensions. Barbaro was given the appropriate information and then told that he would be receiving a copy of the upcoming edition of the "Citizens' Guide to State Services" in honor of his record call.

Mr. Barbaro's question was only one of the million answered by Citizen Information Service, an information and referral agency which provides assistance to citizens throughout the state. One of the first toll-free telephone "hotlines" for general state government information, CIS was launched on May 15, 1975. The goals that were established back in 1975 are the same today — to bring state government closer to the people who live in Massachusetts.

Over the years, CIS has grown from receiving 19 telephone calls a day to over 500 calls a day, providing information on topics which range from the status of pending legislation, to consumer affairs, elderly concerns, the environment, and much more.

Whether the call is "Who is my representative?", or "What are my rights concerning maternity leave?", Citizen Information Service is the office that will provide the answer. Both simple and complex questions are answered Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at (617) 727-7030 in Metro-Boston and 1-800-392-6090 outside the Metropolitan area. Foreign language assistance is available in Spanish and Italian.

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

The Greatest Valentine

The greatest gift that we can give,
Cannot be purchased in a store.
It lasts far longer than we live,
For it endures forevermore.

It's not a picture framed in gold,
Or string of pearls or diamond ring.
It's not a sable, mink or stole,
Or jeweled crown for queen or king.

The precious gift to give is "Love."
We cannot keep it for ourselves.
It's given to us by God above,
To give and share - for it's
"His Love."

"Beachcomber"

After working 20, 30 or more years, a man or woman has a right to retire (if he or she wants to). But no one should ever retire mentally because that's like coasting, and you can't do that very long without going downhill. I asked Leland Prebble (who has been retired two years) how he's getting along. "I'm doing fine," he said, "except the worst thing about retiring is drinking coffee on my own time." "I'll admit, Lee," I told him, "that coffee tastes better drinking it on company time, but you have no 'grounds' to complain - at least you're not paying 50 cents for a cup of mud."

Vinny Harrington of Reading drove his car to New Hampshire. He met another motorist on a bridge too narrow for two cars to pass. "I never back up for an idiot," shouted Vinny. "That's okay," said the other man, as he shifted into reverse, "I always do!"

My cousin Gary Connors of Lynnfield called the police and told them that while walking in the dark, he was hit on the head. An officer dispatched to the scene solved the case when he stepped on the rake, too. It seems that Gary forgot to take his garden tools in last fall.

I said to Kathy, "I never could understand why a beautiful red-headed Irish Coleen like you ever married me." "Truthfully, I thought you were well-off," she said with a sigh. I never told her that I was well off, but after our marriage it was too late. I remember when I worked in the Boston Navy Yard. I brought home a beautiful bouquet of roses. Kathy hugged and kissed me, and then I had to spoil everything saying, "I don't know why you are making such a fuss and going all to pieces, honey, some guy forgot them on the bus!" And some of you readers thought I was smart. But I am honest.

Bob and Carol Young of Tewksbury have been fans of Woodchips since its very first column over five years ago. I asked Bob if he ever heard of architects with fallen arches? TV repairmen with rabbit ears? Telephone operators who have gone ding-a-ling? My Aunt Nora of Wilmington snapped, "I'll bet they know a carpenter who writes a column and has bats in the belfrey!"

When I was going to school, many of my classmates would bring apples for the teacher. With my puns, jokes and quips, I nearly sent my teacher "bananas." She's retired living in the San Francisco Bay area. She invited me to drop in anytime. She knows that I can't swim.

Congratulations to Lillian Buckley, who has accepted a position as the full-time director of the Burlington Housing Authority. The awesome responsibilities require a person who is friendly, compassionate and charitable and dedicated to lending an ear to people's problems in housing and helping them if possible. Lillian Buckley is eminently qualified to be a director of housing. Woodchips wishes you the very best.

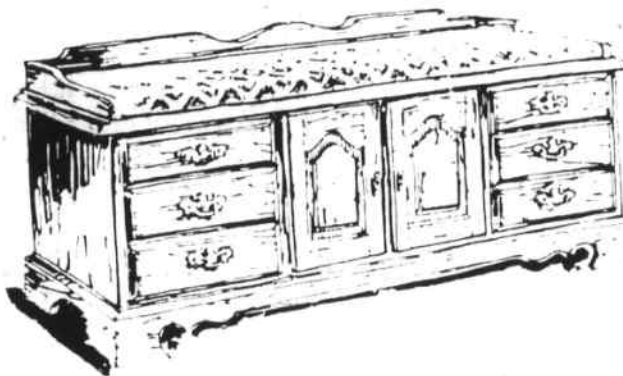

When my father decided to buy a house, Mr. Green, a realtor with the sweetest brogue I ever heard, said, "Giovanni, I'm going to show you a house that's without a flaw!" "Scusa," my father replied, "but what are we going to walk on?" The house needed minor repairs, especially where the leg of the bathtub protruded through the kitchen ceiling downstairs. My father bought the house, and then went to the bank to borrow some money to fix the place up. He said to the pretty lady at a desk, "I would like to speak to the loan arranger." She had a wonderful sense of humor for she said, "I'm sorry, but the loan arranger is out to lunch, but would you care to talk to Tonto, Kimasavi?"

Seven Wilmington students received special certificates for their help in the drug abuse prevention program. Jodi Pellegrini, Millie Ann

Cavanaugh, Brian Oxman, Kristen Lubanski, Gina DeSantis, Jimmy DeMarco and Tom Killilea were thanked by Asst. Supt. of Schools Henry Dembowski, Chief of Police Bobby Stewart, Juvenile Officer Bob Spencer, School Principal Mary Driscoll, and Safety Officer Bob Shelley. Woodchips has no puns, quips or jokes at this point — only my thanks for these children and the many others who are working so hard to eradicate this terrible addiction that like a cobra engulfs so many in the flower of their youth.

Joseph Linehan and Joanne DeLuca were named Wilmington High School Students of the Month of January. I didn't graduate in the top half of my class, but with my low grades I helped make the top half possible.

I really believe that W.C. Fields gave sound advice when he said, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again and then quit. There's no sense being a darn fool about it!" John Nowak was determined to learn to play the harmonica. After four years of inhaling, exhaling, blowing in, and blowing out, the music still sounds like a buzz saw hitting a nail trying to cut through an oak log. He finally quit and is now taking up pianos — he works part-time with a furniture mover.

Richard Marzilli of Tewksbury has been promoted to assistant vice president for First Bank. He is the manager of the bank's Tewksbury office. Richard's ready smile and friendliness dispels the myth that bankers are cold, stoic and without a sense of humor. I'm never irritated when a bank teller wants me to identify myself. I usually pull out a small mirror, look into it and say, "Yep, that's me." One time I wasn't sure, but then I remembered that I hadn't shaved for a week. I asked George Guyette, an old Indian wrestler, why he hadn't wrestled for years. "Boy, you must be stupid," he exclaimed. "Where am I going to find any old Indians these days?"

Well, you better think twice about asking for "one more for the road." You may get a state trooper for a chaser. Woodchips takes great pleasure in announcing the promotion of William P. McAuliffe of Wilmington and Edward Cronin of Reading to the rank of Lieutenant Colonels of the Massachusetts State Police. Lt. Col. McAuliffe will oversee the State Police Academy, Traffic Bureau, Ballistics and Communications. Lt. Col. Cronin was the commanding officer at Logan Airport. Folks, I misplaced the notes that I had, so I'll tell you more about these fine gentlemen and fans of this column when I find them. If Kathy and I don't do something soon about housecleaning, I'll be lucky to find my typewriter.

In America when photographers take pictures, they generally ask their subjects to say "cheese." In Italy, the word is "pizza." The members of the crew of "Old Ironsides" are chosen for their "strong constitutions."

Most women I know are like pianos — upright, polished and grand. Marie Tully is a classical piano player. She left a note for her handsome husband Robert, saying, "Dear Bob, I have gone 'Chopin,' I have a long 'Liszt,' so don't expect me 'Bach' in a 'Minuet.'"

Kathy just finished her first crash diet of the year. This one was eating only coconuts and bananas. She didn't lose any weight, but boy, can she climb a tree!

Woodchips congratulates Daniel Kennedy, senior news editor of the Daily Times Chronicle. The only advice I can give you, Dan, is "Never go on a trip to the South Sea Islands. My friend Richard Powers was captured by cannibals while on a tour of the Islands. The cannibal chief asked, "What do you do in the States?" "I'm the editor of the Revere Journal," Dick replied. "Cheer up," the cannibal chief said, "After dinner tonight, you'll be editor in chief." Good Luck, Dan Kennedy.

Happy Valentine's Day to all and especially to these Personality Winners: Cindy Adams, Suzie Johnson, Maureen McGurn, Theresa

Martin, Elaine Haggerty, Tracey Heenan, Connie Johnson, Marie Marino, Michele Nottebart, Grace Boutwell, Martha Burns, Angie Quino, Bernice Sullivan, Angie LaTerza, Mary Poole, Carol Rindone, Ann Turner, Pam MacKill, Sandy (of Pinewood Garden), Nancy Murphy, Maureen Lampher, Edna White, Patricia Amundsen, and Betsy Rogers. I love you all.

CAUTION: Before deciding on a diamond it is imperative that you inspect the stone very carefully under 10X magnification in order to see with your own eyes the nature and extent of internal imperfections. A heavily imperfect diamond not only lacks brilliance & beauty, it is not a wise investment. Also, you'll want to avoid diamonds that are dark in color, because of those who advertise inferior diamonds at low prices as bait to lure you in. Come to Diamond Imports and you will be educated to make the intelligent choice. We promise you'll never regret it!
